Azure, meet Mark Morgan. Mark is an out bisexual, dyslexic, Jewish, Republican ham radio operator, who once participated in the "Morse code vs. no-code" debate (to the point of writing several letters) about 8-10 years ago. His side in that debate came out ahead, on balance, and the requirements for operators to know Morse code were greatly loosened.
Since then, he has acquired a fair-sized fan club of homophobes, anti-Semites, and spelling lamers, uniformly cowards hiding behind the nyms of their "enemies", especially Mark himself, sometimes using his callsign (KB9RQZ), or his Polish-American wife's name and/or callsign.
The most prominent member of the club is Roger "Woger Wankstain" Wiseman (who recently outed himself, possibly by accident), who particularly likes the nym "Marqueer", and he, like all fan club members, hates Mark with the burning passion of a million suns. The "ipunce" blogspot is one of their favourite k00kshite (one k00kshite, many k00kshite, it's all k00kshite), and any mention of it is usually an indication of the MMFC at its obsessive work. Repetition of "indeed" is also such an indication.

Mark and fan club, meet Azure. Azure is http://uncyclopedia.org/wiki/Bat_Fuck_Insane , but funnier than your fanbois, Mark.

"Consider that language a moment. 'Purposefully and materially supported hostilities against the United States' is in the eye of the beholder, and this administration has proven itself to be astonishingly impatient with criticism of any kind. The broad powers given to Bush by this legislation allow him to capture, indefinitely detain, and refuse a hearing to any American citizen who speaks out against Iraq or any other part of the so-called 'War on Terror.'

"If you write a letter to the editor attacking Bush, you could be deemed as purposefully and materially supporting hostilities against the United States. If you organize or join a public demonstration against Iraq, or against the administration, the same designation could befall you. One dark-comedy aspect of the legislation is that senators or House members who publicly disagree with Bush, criticize him, or organize investigations into his dealings could be placed under the same designation. In effect, Congress just gave Bush the power to lock them up." -- William Rivers Pitt

"When I told Abbie Hoffman that he was the first one who made me laugh since Lenny Bruce died, Hoffman said, "Really? He was my god." The combination of satirical irreverence and sense of justice that Bruce and Hoffman shared was the real spirit behind the Yippies--a term I coined to describe a phenomenon that already existed: an organic coalition of stoned hippies and political activists who engaged in such actions as throwing money on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, then explaining to reporters the meaning of that symbolism. Folksinger Phil Ochs summed it up: "A demonstration should turn you on, not turn you off." So when journalists link the Yippies with misleading bedfellows, at best it's careless shorthand; at worst it's deliberate demonization. Osama bin Laden wanted an aircraft to crash into the Pentagon. Abbie Hoffman merely wanted to levitate it." -- Paul Krassner, http://tinyurl.com/ehu3v

"You never asked someone who goes into areas of the internet that are only for adults who has an underage id somehow or another if they are a cop posing as an underage person online?
I guess lots of people just don't watch dateline or read stories much.
Why don;t you go to pervertedjustice,com and see what they do. They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they lied to membners of the public.
They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they posed as an underage person and agreed to do all sorts of sex acts wioth adult males, and they are adults posing as teenager themselves. They make themsleves into liars by falsely impersonating underage persons and by not fuilfilling the words they tell the victims online in their chats.
Why don't you read it where they tell these victims of their deceit about how they have been with grown men and such? Why don't you read it where they say, "That would be cool." after someone makes an advance towards an adult who is posing as a teenager? And, where they agree to meet the person, etc.

Lost control, didn't you?
Is that why you feel as if you need to lie so much now? I see where lots of these false impersonation games are not sticking. They feel as if they can lie and then order the victims to get counseling in the gayblade, governmental, pro-choice tax leech counseling centers. They are doing nothing more than usury and fraud in many cases." -- Wentzky almost comes out of the closet as a pedo/ephebophile in MID: <H%%Eg.28916$Uq1.22411@bignews6.bellsouth.net>

I believe what comes around goes around and I know full well that it's just bad juju to wish such a level of turmoil and ill upon other humans, warmongering gay-hating maladroits or no, and that the real path of enlightenment is paved with forgiveness and progress and white-hot love and turning the other cheek and scotch.

"Consider that language a moment. 'Purposefully and materially supported hostilities against the United States' is in the eye of the beholder, and this administration has proven itself to be astonishingly impatient with criticism of any kind. The broad powers given to Bush by this legislation allow him to capture, indefinitely detain, and refuse a hearing to any American citizen who speaks out against Iraq or any other part of the so-called 'War on Terror.'

"If you write a letter to the editor attacking Bush, you could be deemed as purposefully and materially supporting hostilities against the United States. If you organize or join a public demonstration against Iraq, or against the administration, the same designation could befall you. One dark-comedy aspect of the legislation is that senators or House members who publicly disagree with Bush, criticize him, or organize investigations into his dealings could be placed under the same designation. In effect, Congress just gave Bush the power to lock them up." -- William Rivers Pitt

"When I told Abbie Hoffman that he was the first one who made me laugh since Lenny Bruce died, Hoffman said, "Really? He was my god." The combination of satirical irreverence and sense of justice that Bruce and Hoffman shared was the real spirit behind the Yippies--a term I coined to describe a phenomenon that already existed: an organic coalition of stoned hippies and political activists who engaged in such actions as throwing money on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, then explaining to reporters the meaning of that symbolism. Folksinger Phil Ochs summed it up: "A demonstration should turn you on, not turn you off." So when journalists link the Yippies with misleading bedfellows, at best it's careless shorthand; at worst it's deliberate demonization. Osama bin Laden wanted an aircraft to crash into the Pentagon. Abbie Hoffman merely wanted to levitate it." -- Paul Krassner, http://tinyurl.com/ehu3v

not fuilfilling the words they tell the victims online in their chats. Why don't you read it where they tell these victims of their deceit about how they have been with grown men and such? Why don't you read it where they say, "That would be cool." after someone makes an advance towards an adult who is posing as a teenager? And, where they agree to meet the person, etc.
Lost control, didn't you?
Is that why you feel as if you need to lie so much now? I see where lots of these false impersonation games are not sticking. Uh, _no_, the "fake" would be the Mark Morgan Fan Clubber using his name and callsign (and making an invalid comparison to the "Number of the Beast", recently established as "616"). Incidentally, I see you appreciate Kevin Cannon's satire of MCP (which means exactly what you'd expect, and MCP the "masculist" is quite proud of it), of soc.men.

their contact info. You are scared of being 'outed' because you are a pathological abuser of usenet, and people rightly despise you for it.

You're afraid of being reported to the authorities or, better, visited by a couple of guys with baseball bats. Other people don't have this obsessive fear. Ward Hardman himself has posted plenty of personal information - nothing that anyone else added was hidden in any way. You're so fucking scared you've built up this whole sick mythology about different categories of bad dudes who 'out' scum like you.

"Meanwhile you are the ugliest pigfucker in the universe. You are the coward without ethics. You call me a 'newbie' - ha! what an asshole you are. Those who want to remain anonymous do so. There is absolutely no way you could identify me, not unless you had the sort of subpoena power that only gets turned on for big-time terrorists. That's because I chose to be anonymous. Some people don't. Only really stupid dicks like you choose the sort of semi-anonymity which leaves you in constant fear.

And yet he made big, blowhard claims that he is a licensed Indiana teacher. Try to look him up at

http://mustang.doe.in.gov/TEACH/teach_inq.cfm

and you will fail. You will also fail to find him listed if you go to the similar web sites maintained by Illinois and Michigan.

Also he/she has to post from many different sources and under many names, i.e.: "KB9RQZ - 1 to whatever"

and you call everybody else a fake - you don't appear to have a working brain!

Some one needs to help this guy he's looking for a male lover

Name: IronMan
E-mail address: w0bkr@arrl.net Comments: I love the out doors. I am a hopeless romantic and loves to talk and share. I am also somewhat hard to get to know because I cam cautious. I protect my heart and emotions.
Once you know me you know I love life and love to laugh, love and have fun. I am an individual of contradictions. I love quiet evenings and I love heavy metal music. I love to be different, not being a conformist to anything, full of expression. If you would like to chat, share, or just need an ear, write me.

Lets make the game field a bit more level , look up buttholes criminal record at Oakland County Circuit Court , Michigan .
Type in Leland Scott in the search boxes and let it rip .

.....http://www.oakgov.com/clerkrod/courtexplorer/index.html

Check out the felony record (ends with a "FY") . You can search for the meaning of the last two letters on site and anything that has a "F" in it is a FELONY. For a few dollars , you can order a copy to show to all of your friends !!! All of you folks wonder why he lives in a slum apartment ? Ever heard of restitution ? That felony was a big one !! Who says grand theft doesn't pay ??? Flippin' moron .

And while you're at it , have a good laugh at his divorce proceedings .
Seems like KC8LDO is another deadbeat when it comes to paying up on alimony to his ex . Sure he makes a good wage , he is also giving most of it away . Anybody that earns minimum wage takes home more money than this butthole .

What a flippin' butthole and hypocrit !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Book smart and a stupid moron in the real world .

Hardy har har !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

I'll see about getting his driver's record , that has to be a riot !!
Stay tuned for more back stabbing because it is FUN !!!!!!!

Between the crap about adair and mork it's amazing people still frequent this ng. The days of people arguing about feed line length versus swr seems like a distant memory. Are there any old timers here who want to try and turn the tide?

Hello Jim (this group is a sewer)

I'm still here, and on 11 meters ssb.

I'm about to do the c131 mod to my kenwood ts870.

Are you on the air now?

Not yet Steve as I have to figure out where to mount the JoGunn 5+5 now that I put a second story on the house. A friend gave me a 40' tower but its difficult to position it as you know its quite crowded here on the island and neighbors are close.

Copy that. Perhaps start with a ground plane or dipole first to get a feel for things, I'm certainly learning from my mistakes with antenna placement but that shit runs into money.

I'd be golden -without- the powerline noise, and the electric company has been fairly accommodating with attempts to repair it, no glory.

So now I'm running 300' of lmr-400 to the south building, to get away from the static.

If I had to do it over again I'd start with a dipole or plane, fwiw. Those are easier to move doncha know.

ps. 2510 still strong. :)

YEP!
They think "JUSTICE" turns on a Dime.
Justice turns "Slowly"!
It doesn't Jump at a Chance, it collects evidence dots its "i"'s and crosses its "T"'s, then it "SLOWLY" begins to move, Stealth as a CAT!

"When I told Abbie Hoffman that he was the first one who made me laugh since Lenny Bruce died, Hoffman said, "Really? He was my god." The combination of satirical irreverence and sense of justice that Bruce and Hoffman shared was the real spirit behind the Yippies--a term I coined to describe a phenomenon that already existed: an organic coalition of stoned hippies and political activists who engaged in such actions as throwing money on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, then explaining to reporters the meaning of that symbolism. Folksinger Phil Ochs summed it up: "A demonstration should turn you on, not turn you off." So when journalists link the Yippies with misleading bedfellows, at best it's careless shorthand; at worst it's deliberate demonization. Osama bin Laden wanted an aircraft to crash into the Pentagon. Abbie Hoffman merely wanted to levitate it." -- Paul Krassner, http://tinyurl.com/ehu3v

Art Deco?
Figures!
Been more than that, but hey some laws have a 10 year Statute of Limitations.
Where on going events can be tied to the claim, it can be asserted back.
10 Years tied to a 20 Year Government Program is 30 Years Right?
Or "The Life of the Facility"!
A Capital Offense requires Capital Punishment!
Even and Especially where a "Government" is concerned!
Be Civil or learn Civility.
How do you break an Attorney?
Proceed "Pro Se" and "Make them work their Ass OFF"!
Law is just sticking pins in a Voodoo Doll anyway.
I file something, you file something, I reply, the Court intervenes, then I file something, you file something, I reply and the Court Intervenes, then I file Something, You File Something, I file a Reply, and the Court Intervenes.
Depends on the Judicial Hormone Levels that Day.
Nothing to loose but my home and life.
They poisoned my Home so that means little.

"Only" way out is "Through Them"!!!!!!!!!
Albie may be willfully Blind and believe anyone could have predicted the

Only person I know of who predicted the English Earth Quake this Spring

Albie and friends can't laugh at me with 100 percent Predictions "ON

"When I told Abbie Hoffman that he was the first one who made me laugh since Lenny Bruce died, Hoffman said, "Really? He was my god." The combination of satirical irreverence and sense of justice that Bruce and Hoffman shared was the real spirit behind the Yippies--a term I coined to describe a phenomenon that already existed: an organic coalition of stoned hippies and political activists who engaged in such actions as throwing money on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, then explaining to reporters the meaning of that symbolism. Folksinger Phil Ochs summed it up: "A demonstration should turn you on, not turn you off." So when journalists link the Yippies with misleading bedfellows, at best it's careless shorthand; at worst it's deliberate demonization. Osama bin Laden wanted an aircraft to crash into the Pentagon. Abbie Hoffman merely wanted to levitate it." -- Paul Krassner, http://tinyurl.com/ehu3v

I heard nothing but locals on 10/11.
20 and 40 were another story!

Even a general ticket will get you most of HF...but some folks like it in one place only.
Ain't nothing wrong with that...

I can't block the assholes because they keep changing stuff in their addys.
I wish they would stop it already. I don't want to hear their bullsh!t.
I find myself peeking in and marking the NG as read.

Nice site Sharkie. Thanks. I'm more particular to the air side of defense as the family has been building planes since the '30's. Last plane was the F14D Super Tomcat. Its retired now so I've moved on to state of the art telecomm's.

Hello Scott in Baltimore:

I have keep an eye on the conditions as well, and Iam not hearing anything except some scattered skip out the Central and South America areas.

The experts are also befuttled asking were is the skip in sun spot cycle 24 is. I have called then a few times but eventually get hung up on! They must not shot skip, or want to get their knee's in the brezze? http://www.solarcycle24.com/

As I tune across the bands I am hearing a noisy power line down our dirt road, and the boys won't fix it. So I will have to fix it.

20, 40, and 80 have and some local traffic but not much. I was tuning in on 12 meters and thought I heard a FM station out there.... more listening

Keep the goof balls out of the news group is a easy as turning your beam to get rid the goof balls on the radio, and even takes less times. I just filter them out, takes about 15 seconds. And ya get good knowing who they are so even becomes esiser.

How about somewhere in the extra portion of 20 meters?

The guy gets drunk then goes on a rampage spewing his crap over a slew of news groups using many different names. This has been going on from what I'm told for years now.

I live around the area where this jerk lives and I've heard nothing but bad shit about him from others on the air especially when he's really drunk. When he gets all liquored up he thinks he's some kind of bad ass. Looks like he does the same when on the computer too. He's not well liked that's for sure, on the air or in this news group.

The plays of Aristophanes prove that the overwhelming majority of Athenians were straight and idiogenogamotics were ridiculed as either being effeminate or only doing kologamosis in return for political or financial favours. No, stops on ELPH's demand that the law be applied EQUALLY to ALL!
Defense of Home brought me to protect HOME, and the Gate to Heaven!
I fight "The GODS", who want to invade the place and destroy "The Gate to Heaven"!
Led to me understanding My Name, the Covenant, and GAY HISTORY!
My Ancestors were The Laddies who wore Skirts, the Elves, Fairies, Brownies, Pixies. . . . . .
Changelings, Shapeshifters, the House of Seth Gen 4: L2 Verses!
The "Strangers" of the Bible!
MT. 19:12, some are "Born of the Mothers Womb" GET USED TO IT!!!!
Besides, if Adam in Gen 2 was created in Gods image, then altered, and God then gave Eve the "Covenant" of Seth, then the Idea is, Evolution.
Mankind will no matter what evolve into a Hermaphrodite Race!
Such is "The Will of God"!

You can't hate evolution, "Shit Happens"!

2763. Re: shoveanovaupyourass day 3254 of watching a UP retard because his brain is still MIA as of course it must be since you can't act so wacked and stupid, and actually believing that the law requires you to report anybody you can think of for an alleged pander note that everyone knows you created and sent to yourself, OTOH nobody wants to sue because we would have to give our real names and we don't dare do that because the UP kook will lie and falsely report us too, but in the long run nothing will happen in return as law enforcement is well informed that the UP fool is mentally unstable, that is ok because the kook fame as a total flake is slowly spreading across the net and in his area, I guess he likes getting banned from web sites and being ejected from ham clubs, and is seen as total obtuse impotent buffoon, personally we do not care, but we do enjoy the laughs from the never ending rant, nevertheless it is clear however that the UP kook has no life, except to victimize his own wife by dragging her down socially in the process. 2783. shoveanovaupyourass day 3254 of watching a UP retard because his brain is still MIA as of course it must be since you can't act so wacked and stupid, and actually believe that the law requires you to report anybody you can think of for an alleged pander note that everyone knows you created and sent to yourself, OTOH nobody wants to sue because we would have to give our real names and we don't dare do that because the UP kook will lie and falsely report us too, but in the long run nothing will happen in return, as law enforcement is well informed that the UP fool is mentally unstable, that is ok because the kook's fame as a total flake is slowly spreading across the net and in his area, I guess he likes getting banned from web sites and being ejected from ham clubs, and likes to be seen as a total obtuse impotent buffoon, personally we do not care, but we do enjoy the laughs from the never ending rant, nevertheless it is clear however that the UP kook has no life, except to victimize his own wife by dragging her down socially in the process. 2787. shoveanovaupyourass day 3254 of watching a UP retard because his brain is still MIA as of course it must be since you can't act so wacked and stupid, and actually believe that the law requires you to report anybody you can think of for an alleged pander note that everyone knows you created and sent to yourself, OTOH nobody wants to sue because we would have to give our real names and we don't dare do that because the UP kook will lie and falsely report us too, but in the long run nothing will happen in return, as law enforcement is well informed that the UP fool is mentally unstable, that is ok because the kook's fame as a total flake is slowly spreading across the net and in his area, I guess he likes getting banned from web sites and being ejected from ham clubs, and likes to be seen as a total obtuse impotent buffoon, personally we do not care, but we do enjoy the laughs from the never ending rant, nevertheless it is clear however that the UP kook has no life, except to victimize his own wife by dragging her down socially in the process. a nym shifing cry baby on top of that....Shalom Shalom!

2800. shoveanovaupyourass day 3254 of watching a UP retard because his brain is still MIA as of course it must be since you can't act so wacked and stupid, and actually believe that the law requires you to report anybody you can think of for an alleged pander note that everyone knows you created and sent to yourself, OTOH nobody wants to sue because we would have to give our real names and we don't dare do that because the UP kook will lie and falsely report us too, but in the long run nothing will happen in return, as law enforcement is well informed that the UP fool is mentally unstable, that is ok because the kook's fame as a total flake is slowly spreading across the net and in his area, I guess he likes getting banned from web sites and being ejected from ham clubs, and likes to be seen as a total obtuse impotent buffoon, personally we do not care, but we do enjoy the laughs from the never ending rant, nevertheless it is clear however that the UP kook has no life, except to victimize his own wife by dragging her down socially in the process. Shalom!

2805. RADICAL LOON

In the past week, TV anchors have taken to claiming that Obama "refuted" John McCain's statement that Obama launched his political career at the home of former Weather Underground leader Ayers.

No, Obama "denied" it; he didn't "refute" it. If "denying" something is the same as "refuting" it, then maybe the establishment media can quit harping on Palin's supposed lack of qualifications to be president, since she too "refuted" that by denying it.

Back before the media realized it needed to lie about Obama launching his political career at Ayers' house, the Los Angeles Times provided an eyewitness account from a liberal who attended the event.

"When I first met Barack Obama, he was giving a standard, innocuous little talk in the living room of those two legends-in-their-own-minds, Bill Ayers and Bernardine Dohrn. They were launching him -- introducing him to the Hyde Park community as the best thing since sliced bread."

The Times has now stripped this item from its Web page, but the great blogger Patterico has preserved it for posterity on his Web page.

Obama's glib remark that "Bill Ayers is a professor of education in Chicago; 40 years ago when I was 8 years old he engaged in despicable acts with a domestic group. I have roundly denounced those attacks" -- doesn't answer anything.

First of all, the fact that Ayers is a professor of education proves only one thing: He is dumber than any person without an education degree.

Ayers is such an imbecile, we ought to be amazed that he's teaching at a university -- even when you consider that it's an ed school -- except all former violent radicals end up teaching. Roughly 80 percent of former Weathermen are full college professors -- 99 percent if you don't include the ones killed in shoot-outs with the police or in prison -- i.e., not yet pardoned by a Democratic president.

Any other profession would have banned a person like Ayers. Universities not only accept former domestic terrorists, but also move them to the front of the line. In addition to Ayers, among those once on the FBI's most-wanted list who ended up in cushy college teaching positions are Bernardine Dohrn (Northwestern University), Mark Rudd (a junior college in New Mexico) and Angela Davis (History of Consciousness Department, University of California at Santa Cruz).

While others were hard at work on Ph.D.s, Susan Rosenberg was conspiring to kill cops and blow up buildings, and was assembling massive caches of explosives. This put her on the fast track for a teaching position at Hamilton College!

Despite having absolutely no qualifications to teach, having earned only a master's degree in "writing" through a correspondence course, Rosenberg was offered a position at Hamilton within a few years of President Clinton pardoning her in 2001, releasing her from a 58-year prison sentence for participating in the murder of cops and possessing more than 700 pounds of explosives.

But Obama thinks it's a selling point to say that Ayers is a college professor.

Hundreds of college professors have signed a letter vouching for Ayers, which would be like Lester Maddox producing a letter from George Wallace assuring us that Maddox is a respected member of the community. No, really, I've got the letter right here!

The media keep citing the fact that the money Obama and Ayers distributed to idiotic left-wing causes came -- as The New York Times put it -- "from Walter H. Annenberg, the billionaire publisher and philanthropist and President Richard M. Nixon's ambassador to the United Kingdom."

Great Republican though he was, Walter Annenberg died in 2002. The money came from the Annenberg Foundation, which, like all foundations, distributes money to projects that its founder would despise. John Kerry ran for president on the late John Heinz's money. That didn't mean Republican Heinz was endorsing Kerry.

As John O'Sullivan says, any foundation that is not explicitly right-wing will become a radical left-wing organization within a few years. It could be the Association of University Women, the American Association of Retired People, the American Rose Growers, the Foundation for the Study of Railroad Engineers or the Choral Society of Newport Beach.

Left-wing radicals swarm to free foundation money, where they can give gigantic grants to one another and they will never have to do a day's work. That's exactly what Obama and Ayers did with Annenberg's money.

None of the Annenberg money went to schoolchildren. It went to Ayers' left-wing crank friends to write moronic papers that we hope no one ever reads.

Instead of teaching students reading and writing, Ayers thinks they should be taught to rebel against America's "imperialist" social structure. In 2006, Ayers was in Venezuela praising communist dictator Hugo Chavez, saying, "We share the belief that education is the motor-force of revolution."

He has backed a line of schoolbooks such as one titled "Teaching Science for Social Justice."

Forget about Ayers' domestic terrorism when Obama "was 8 years old." Does he agree with Ayers' idiot ideas right now?

Hello Jim:

Yeah 18 feet seems top work well in a mobile installation. Why is that?

Is it because the antenna puts RF Energy on the coax outer shield due to a lack of ground surface. In all my antennas installs it seems that way.

So 18 feet of coax is roughly 3/4 of a wavelength, (with a velocity factory of .66) and any RF Energy coming back will have to come back thru another 3/4 wavelength of coax.

Maybe that length vs wavelength is the best to use. Your comments....

2862. shownatovah day 144 lawsuit watch is still MIA as of course it must be since you can't sue anyoone for doing what the laws requires OTOH to sue you still have to give your real names and that you dare not do for fear for what will hapen in return that is ok because your fame as Kooks is slowly spreading accorss the net I guess you like being seem as kooky and impotent, personaly i would not care that but enjoy fellows, it is clear howver that I am the very center of your life and to sue youfor false accusation you must be the target of them meaning allegedly only k3vr and w4nti are able to sue

Hey Jay, I was taking the piss when I posted that. We've seen many posts on this subject in the past and was fishing for someone to start an on topic post. It was an SWR vs feed length thing. I don't believe so with the limited length in a mobile installation (though you quote 18' which is particularly long IMHO). In your opinion why does it matter?
Regards, Jim.

Oh, you don't grasp what the "Galactic Killfile" is at all, do you?
I'll attempt to explain once more. The GK is reserved for those who are deemed too boring to be worthy of further awards, though they may well be kooky enough to surpass even the likes of Chung and Wollmann, were they permitted the opportunity to win so many awards. Basically, the purpose is to keep the awards from being hogged by those who are insufficiently entertaining to be deserving of so much attention from the FNVW.

Then why did Miss Pinky Sue Lamb declare me net dead and warn all the "Gay Caballers" not to reply to me under penality of being stabbed with her nail file? Ask col. Jake the Ape-Man as he's scared shitless to reply to me directly which is soooo funny - a psychopath being scared of

No one except your wife is afraid of you, you dumb fuck.
Your shtick (such as it is) amounts to this: faglames, racist trolling and tepid attempts at other highly forgettable forms of what must pass as humor in your hovel.

FYI, you gormless lackwit.

well, it looks like CB will soon be illegal here in the U.S. as well as ham radio, frs, and gmrs.

Even if HFA (hams for action) is successful in forcing homeowners associations to allow cb and ham antennas, you STILL won't be able to use them since most homeowner associations now prohibit the actual transmissions theirselves of CB and ham radio.

I was looking for apartments. One county said that by law, whenever you move to anywhere within that county, you must join a homeowners' association. It's the law.

Some people say move into a house there without a hoa and without CC&Rs.

Nope. That doesn't work. take a look at the law again. Whenever you move to ANYWHERE within that county, INCLUDING a non hoa non CC&R house, then BY LAW, you MUST JOIN a HOA. Then the formerly non hoa non CC&R house automatically becomes a HOA controlled CC&R restricted house.

And if you don't, you're breaking the law and liens can be placed on your house by whetever hoa decides to file a lawsuit against you.

And from what I've read, courts have been continually ruling in favor of the hoas in most of the instances.

And more and more cities, counties, and I've heard even some states, are following suit.

And people have already said that the FCC said they don't have any authority over it since counties forcing you to involuntarily join A HOA is you voulantarily agreeing to join a hoa and the hoa rules.

Some people say transmit mobile

Nope. That doesn't work either.

Most current hoa rules are worded something like "no cb or ham radio transmissions are allowed on hoa property or any area controlled by the hoa.

From what other hams said, I originally thought this meant you were safe as long as you were transmitting from off of hoa property. (And so did they).

Nope. It turns out that even if you're transmitting from off of the hoa property, if your signal is receivable on hoa property, it IS "transmitting ON Hoa property and on areas controlled by the hoa" and you are in violation of both the hoa rules and laws.

Otherwise the rules would be worded "no transmitting from hoa property" instead of being worded "no transmitting on hoa property".

Some hoas have already went after hams who tried that.

One ham thought he was obeying his hoa rules by transmitting from the public streets around town, not the hoa controlled streets, but only from the public city owned streets around town and his hoa fined him for it and went after him for it.

Another ham did deliberately disobey his hoa rules by transmitting in secret with low power on two meters.

Even though his hoa rules said "no CB or ham radio transmissions allowed".

Neighbors heard him on their scanner, reported it to the hoa, he was fined and took it to court.

His lawyer argued that since other peole in the hoa constantly use their frs/gmrs radios, it was selective enforcement by the hoa and therefore illegal acts by the hoa.

The judge ruled that since frs/gmrs radios do not require a federal license, they are allowed and perfectly illegal, and since ham radio requires a federal license they are not allowed even if you have a federal license to operate one and therefore illegal.

There are several things I find curious about the judge's ruling.

In no particular order,

1. Since when do GMRS radios NOT require a federal license to operate???

2. Why were the frs/gmrs radios still allowed? FRS IS CB. If you don't belive me, just take a look at the FCC rules.
And the hoa rules clearly said no cb transmissions allowed.

3. Since unlicensed radios are allowed and legal, does this mean th ham can put up a CB antenna in violation of the hoa rules since CB doesn't require a federal license and the judge already said that radios which do not require a federal license are okay and legal to operate, even on hoa property?

So there's at least two instances, in two different places where legally, unlicensed part 15 devices legally have legal priority over federally licensed part 97 devices.

Some people say just operate portable.

Nope. A couple of cities near me have passed laws that while not mentioning CB or ham specifically as far as I know, does in effect make them illegal to use at certain times or alltogether.

One of the cities (soorry. I don't remmember which one) passed a ban on portable cell phone use.

Yes, portable, not just mobile.

Their reasoning was that it violates the disturbing the peace law since other people passing by you while you're walking in the parking lot, in the store, or on the public sidewalks can hear you talking to the other person on the cell phone.

Now this law while as far as I know not actually mentioning CB or ham radio makes CB and ham radio users twice as guilty of breaking the law since the passerbys hear not only you talking to the other person on the radio, but also hear the other person on the radio talking to you.

the city says such devices are to only be used from your home. They're not allowed to be used in public.

But you can't use them from home because of hoa rules.

The hoas say such devices should only be used in public off of hoa property.

But the city says not in public, only from home.

So you end up in court in both cases and having to pay fines in both cases.

So in effect, frs, gmrs, cb radio and ham radio are now illegal in that city.

And other cities will probably soon be following suit.

Which means that eventually , cb and ham radio will be illegal everwhere in the U.S. since the FCC refused to get involved on the grounds of them "not having any authority over it since it's voulantary contract law".

Some people say place a restriction on your home that it can never ever be controlled by hoas or CC&Rs.

Doesn't work either. When you try that, they just take over it by "emnint domain".

Although I don't know how land developers got "eminint domain" over certain places since I thought only the government could do that, but I've seen it happen.

Some people living in homes built before HOAs and CC&Rs came to their neighborhood ended up with hoas placing liens on their homes for refusing to join hoas.

I thought that's a violation of the ex-post-facto laws of the U.S.
Constitution.

People tried to take the hoas to court using that defense.

I only read about one person being sucessful with that defense.

From what I read, the majority who tried that defense ended up losing in court, because the courts ruled that since the hoas are not governments, the laws of the U.S. constitution preventing the government from enacting ex-post-facto laws does not apply to the hoas and therefore, the hoas can legally place a lien on your non HOA non CC&R house for you refusing to join the hoa (even though there's nothing else anywhere saying they can take ovver your land) and can legally force you to join the hoa while living in non hoa non CC&R houses.

(From what I read, mostly Illinois courts, but some other places also).

It's actually illegal here to use wireless hands free devices, and was before there were even cell phones. Because it was proven to be more dangerous.

yet somehow, the cell phone companies have gotten away with breaking the law banning them and they are sold in stores around here. Although illegal.

2911. KB9RQZ spams daily according to Giganews AUP

Giganews says:

Spam

Although there is no single, precise definition of spam, and there are differing opinions on what constitutes spam, we will consider the following when reviewing complaints:

* Repetitive Posting Posting the same thing repeatedly in one or more newsgroups will usually be considered spam, regardless of the content.

Giganews is very strict about spamming. You agree to not spam, and you agree to avoid any form of posting that may look like spam. If it is determined that you have posted spam through the Giganews servers, you will be charged a $50 cleanup fee per spam message that you posted,
and your account will be terminated.

Mark needs to be reported. Maybe we could get his credit card charged with a several thousand dollar cleanup fee! YESSS!

Well, he is, admittedly, roughly as crazy as a bedbug, but he's still light-years ahead of Clocky in intellectual development, and he's found the fun in AUK, which is partly why he was officially pardoned (last April) by the FNVW after winning the Tinfoil Sombrero. The other part was taking down his mirror of the AUK website, that being what got him awarded the TS in the first place.

L. Mencken

"Consider that language a moment. 'Purposefully and materially supported hostilities against the United States' is in the eye of the beholder, and this administration has proven itself to be astonishingly impatient with criticism of any kind. The broad powers given to Bush by this legislation allow him to capture, indefinitely detain, and refuse a hearing to any American citizen who speaks out against Iraq or any other part of the so-called 'War on Terror.'

"If you write a letter to the editor attacking Bush, you could be deemed as purposefully and materially supporting hostilities against the United States. If you organize or join a public demonstration against Iraq, or against the administration, the same designation could befall you. One dark-comedy aspect of the legislation is that senators or House members who publicly disagree with Bush, criticize him, or organize investigations into his dealings could be placed under the same designation. In effect, Congress just gave Bush the power to lock them up." -- William Rivers Pitt

"It has become clear in recent months that a critical mass of the American people have seen through the lies of the Bush administration; with the president's polls at an historic low, growing resistance to the war Iraq, and the Democrats likely to take back the Congress in mid-term elections, the Bush administration is on the ropes. And so it is particularly worrying that President Bush has seen fit, at this juncture to, in effect, declare himself dictator." -- Frank Morales

"It does to a certain extant physically and theoretically it holds even into the quantum but there observational confirmation is limited or non existent. That's the problem and the major stumbling block to field unification. For Dr. Einstein held out that a physical based field theory should be sought out and not left to quantum uncertainty of how the universe primly base works. Man made coordinate systems are fine without knowing from where or what is the base essence of what the space as deduced field is composed of, but not totally satisfactory. Anomalies keep space cropping up and scientists have to keep adjusting for these unexpected events. It's like a blind man that has memorized his physical surroundings to a point he feels very comfortable until that one new or unexpected event pops up and he's lost and fumbling." -- nightbat, in one of his more lucid moments.

Why, holy cow! Mark spent months trying to cover up all of those posts which just pop right up when you click on that link you gave.
You don't suppose that he got it wrong, do you? Could all of his effort have been for nothing?

I think that's exactly right. OCD will do that to a person. Poor, foolish Mark.

How sad people have become. Imagine a person actually wishing for civil war. Is that why other countries laugh at us? Fred you pray for death? There must be a place in hell reserved for you Fred.

i'd say he is is already in hell one of his own making after he can't the existance of any he dislikes anywhere without getting nasty about it

I fear civil war since they are never civil affairs (but I don't fear it much) I am more concerned if Obama is elected that he will be murdered by someone like fred (except having more guts) giving us President Biden

I am also concered at what is going to happen when as seem likely the race or too close and does not get called teusdat night (i am hoping for weds afternon myself) or if McCain wins out right a million disapointed people out the cold in downtown Chicago

Again, what city/county and state has this ordinance/law?

So making an amateur staton sound nicer is bad amateur practice" ;) interesting.

Just pointing out that not everyone agrees on what is god and bad amateur practice.

As a matter of fact, I recently found out that what's considered standard good 2 meter operating practice by hams licensed before no coders were ever allowed here(I've lstened on scanners for years) is considered bad 2 meter amateur practice that only no coders do, elsewhere in the country and is even on a lids lists made by someone somewhere else in the country.

And vice versa. What's considered good 2 meter amateur practice elsewhere in the country seems to be considered bad 2 meter amateur practice here.

I guess travellers using 2 meters must have it hard.
Back to echomikes, I guess I should have said I don't plan on ever using a echomike on the amateur bands ever since I found out on the internet that they're "not appreciated on the ham bands".

And I don't remember ever hearing one on the amateur bands whie listening to a scanner.

However, from what I see supposed hams say on the internet, it looks like self-appointed radio cops will complain about and turn me into the FCC for using an echomike on the amateur bands, anyways
causing me a huge finee I can't afford.
when in fact I don't have any echomike at all anywhere.

And of course, you can't prove a negative. Such as you can't prove you never ever had a echomike.

How can that be?

As I recently found out, certain buildings automatically cause an echo effect which makes your transmissions sound like you're using an echomike at full echoing.

Even though you don't have any at all.

I was transmitting from my cell phone (which I've used plebty of times) and the other person told me my voice was really echoing this time.

And even I could hear my voice really echoing in my cell phone. this time. Because of the building and room.

If I had used an amateur radio from there, the other hams would probably have just assumed I was using an echomike

at full echo on amateur frequencies.

If I had used a cb radio from there, the other cbers would probably have just assumed I was using an echomike at full echo on cb frequencies.

The problem isn't really amateur radio operators or cbers. The problem, in my opinion, is certain self-appoined radio cops who automatically assume that they know everything without ever checking what the actual facts are first.

That particular type hears transmissions with a very strong echo and just automatically assumes that you're illegally using an echomike.
And fires off a letter to the FCC.

And all the time, you never ever had one.

The snippet quoted above your comment is most likely an incorrect summary of the actual decision. First, GMRS _does_ require q federal license to operate. Second, the statement that ham radio isn't allowed because it requires federal license to operate isn't a complete statement. "You can't operate if you don't have a license because a license is required" would be a correct statement, for example. "You can't operate a ham station in your home with a license because a federal license is required" would be wrong.

I'd want the citation to the case so I could read it myself. The summary provided is clearly incorrect.

I just rememberd that if you mention or complain to the self-appointed radio cops about them not checking the facts ffirst before they turn someone in, the self-appointed radio cops usually say that the FCC specifically says for them to not check the facts first before turning someon in.

They sometimes even go so far as to say that FCC rules specifically forbids them from checking the facts first before thet turn someone in, but also claim the FCC rules says they still have to turn them in.

If it's true that the FCC has really consistently said this, then part of the blame of innocent people being fined for things they didn't do lies with the FCC.

However, I don't recall ever reading any fcc rules that say any such thing.

I don't know why hams want to comment about CB operators anyway. They have their world and hams have theirs. As long as CB'rs stay on 11 meters and off of 10. More power to them.

Even band conditions can cause an echo effect. I was on 75 meters over the weekend and for about 15 seconds, everytime I stopped transmitting, I heard the tail end of my transmission echoing back at me. It was rather cool.

I've also heard the "echo effect" when the 2 meter band gets really good for DX and two repeaters interfere with each other that share common frequencies.

I would not worry about someone reporting you for an echo mic. Unless you are causing problems with the device, I would not sweat it. I have heard other hams on HF, especially some DX stations, using a hint of reverb on their stations to give the audio a fuller sound.

Nobody has borrowed anything from you or ruined their lives, except you. You, Mark Morgan KB9RQZ, are the creep and a harasser,and quite a few agree with me.

The folks at QRZ.com agree and banned you from posting on the ham boards because of your wacked out behavior.

The folks at HamIsland.net agree and completely banned you from posting there too because you could not stop attacking and fighting with other hams.

Even the folks at the CCRAA voted you out of office because of your behavior and harrassment of other hams.

You brought everything upon yourself, because of your bad behavior, taking it off the net, and continued attack of other hams. You alone are responsible for your tarnished reputation.

Me on the other hand have never been banned from anywhere on the net, or anywhere else for that matter. I've never had even a disparaging word with anyone on the net, except you. Since you left, I see the CCRAA has been better off, good call by the guys at the CCRAA. Three new hams joined the club last month alone.

Maybe one day you will be able to step back, overcome your hypersensitivity, take responsibility for your behavior, and learn how to act in a group without attacking everyone on the board.

How is he a "gay bashing bigot?" He never mentioned anything about "Gay" in his post, it appears that he simply is speaking out about your abuse of flooding usenet.

FYI you hypersensitive fellow, he coud simply be speaking out about Carpal Tunnel Syndrome

What Is Carpal Tunnel Syndrome? Carpal tunnel syndrome (CTS) is a condition brought on by a pinched nerve at the wrist. CTS is classified as a cumulative trauma disorder, which is a disorder caused by repeatedly performing stressful motions with the hands or holding the hand in the same position for long periods of time. It specifically affects the sensitive nerves and blood supply that feeds the hands and wrists, causing numbness, limpness in the wrists and hand, tingling and pain in the arm, hand, and fingers.

The syndrome gets its name from the space in the wrist where the median nerve and nine tendons pass from the forearm into the hand. This tunnel is formed on three sides by the carpal bones of the hand and the strong, broad carpal ligament on top. The median nerve supplies sensation to the thumb, index, and ring fingers. The tendons that course through the tunnel flex the fingers and lie underneath the median nerve within protective sheaths.

With repetitive motion of the fingers, hand, and wrist, the lining of the tendons within the carpal tunnel may swell up. In addition, the ligament that forms the roof of the carpal tunnel may become thicker and broader. Eventually, the tendons and the ligament press on the median nerve.

Anyone who has persistent pain in the hand and wrist should consult a physician for a diagnosis.

You should lighten up and stop attacking other uses of this forum and stop flooding.

The VoiceMax speech processor is not for everyone...
It's only for radio operators that want maximum range from their rig.
VoiceMax is no gimmick... it uses proven AGC technology to produce tangible results. Want to know more?

Nothing, it's just Griffeys' spam through google again.

(need a processor on your CB? contact Brian in his moms basement)

Otherwise killfilter voicemax. No one wanted his 11 meter amplifier either, so he finally stopped that spam.

but dang, almost no dx for months over here in N Ohio. We're running out of

Hello Steve:

Yeah really! The local guys are saying that if we do not see sunspot cycle by Thanks giving it isn't gonna happen for another year.

But the last few times the skip has come in, we hired a witch doctor for a 96 pack and some mirrors, that performed a "Skip Shotin Richael" that only seemed to work a few times. But it maybe the locals have a better handle on the skip conditions than the academic achievement dudes do. Who really knows.

Reckon that has something to do with being radio fans and such, and btw I've yet to see a corona coming off'in my antenna. Is that too much antenna and not enough transmitter? <shrug>

Shot down and stuck in the mud here in the Buckeye.

Carry on sir.

Hello Steve:

Crazy yes, but it keeps from going nuts, right?

Yes again, ya need a few more watts to make the antenna have a Corona.
But thats a good thing, as the Corona will some times causes the end of the antenna to melt. We have seen that in beam antennas. The ends of the driven elements have a significant corona and then melt the ends of the driven elements.

See: http://neasmn.org/antenna/History%20of%20Cubical%20Quad.html

The ends of the Yagi beam elements have metal balls installed to add a significant amount of area to the ends, to NOT have the corona discharge.

I can't really believe your stuck in the mud after hearing how loud some of the Ohio Boys were last time the skip rolled in.

V&#65533;hent&#65533;en terveydenhuoltoa, ruuhkien ja ymp&#65533;rist&#65533;nsuojelun menot. Huomattavasti nykyist&#65533; suurempi osuus uusiutuvista l&#65533;hteist&#65533;. Tuulipuolella Tanska suuntaa merien offshoretuulivoimaan. ES:n tavoite on kaksinkertaistaa tuulivoimaansa s&#65533;hk&#65533;st&#65533; huikeaan 60 prosenttiin!!!

Aurinkosoluille 2030 ennakoidaan 2% ja aaltovoiman 5% s&#65533;hk&#65533;ntuotannosta. Aaltovoimaa pidet&#65533;&#65533;n eritt&#65533;in merkitt&#65533;v&#65533;n&#65533;. Biopolttoainesektorikasvaa 20 miljardiin kruunuun 2,7miljardiin euroon. Kolmannes 2030 voimaloista k&#65533;ytt&#65533;&#65533; jo tehokkaita polttokennoja ja l&#65533;mp&#65533;pumput ovat arkilaitteita. Tutkimuksiin nostetaan 350 miljoonasta miljardiin kruunuun. Suositellaan luopumista verotuksesta joka est&#65533;&#65533; siirtymist&#65533; fossiileista uudisenergiaan. Lentopetrolille veroa. Tanskassa on oleellisesti helpompaa toteuttaa uutta energiapolitiikkaa. Valitettavasti meill&#65533; ei edelleenk&#65533;&#65533;n olla valmiita sellaisiin toimiin, joilla kokonaisenergian kulutus saadaan selv&#65533;&#65533;n laskuun ja uusiutuvan energian ja sit&#65533; tukevan teknologian k&#65533;ytt&#65533; vahvaan nousuun.

This is NOT the ham I was talking about in my other posts. So there IS definitely MORE than one instance (multiple instances) of this happening.

The FCC's excuse that hams with hoa restrictions "can just operate mobile or portable" is a bunch of hogwash and doesn't even hold water.

You do get fined by hoas if you operate a cb or ham radio mobile or portable.

And several people have already said that the FCC has already stated several times that the FCC does not have any authority over it.

So if you can't operate your cb or ham radio from home and also can't operate it mobile or portable, how do you operate it?

Doesn't this mean that the FCC has committed the crime of fraud by fraudently saying hams with

So if you can't legally operate your cb or ham radio from home and p.s. I would have crossposted this to the hoa newsgroups also, but I would like to know what information is any can be given about an antenna that could be mounted in attic. i dont know if the landlord will allow me to use my antron 99 on the house.

I bought a used antron. I was wondering if there are supposed to be washers that go between each of the sections. If so what types are they?

Drew,

Any antenna that you would put in the attice would more than likely be horizontally polarized, unless you have 18 feet of space between the floor and the roof peak. Most CB'ers run vertically polarized antenna so a horizontal antenna would cause you to lose some gain on reception and transmit when taking to someone using a vertically polarized antenna. However, any antenna is better than no antenna at all.

A center fed dipole made out of wire cut for 27.1850 may be your best bet, about 17.5 feet total length from end to end before pruning for resonance, fed in the center with some RG-8 coax. Since it is going to be put in the attic, normal lengths may not apply, so the antenna may need to be longer or shorter than normal, I would start with 18 feet to be safe.

For the Antron-99, the washer for the sections are stainless steel split lock washers, each section only uses one.

Here is a link to a site that provides more detailed information if you are interested in the dipole antenna:

Gas here was $1.56 today

Arrrrgggg! $1.56? You sure know how to hurt a guy LOL.

Can't complain. New York is the land of the taxes and gas is much higher than that, but coming down rapidly. The most I paid was $4.49 per gallon and it is around $2.29 per gallon now. Much better.

Having fun at my job. I love playing radio all day and getting paid to do it ;)
Well, that was one day. The rest of the days have been testing and troubleshooting radios. Still enjoyable and the gang at work is great. A lot of us are veterans - and seems great to hear some of the old terms again that I haven't heard in a number of years.

Copy that Jay, I have a feeling that melting my antenna won't ever be much of a concern. :P

I've been looking at the Kenwood 922 running two 3-500z's to go along with my ts-870. Those seem like decent amplifiers and to have a matching set on the desk would be nice, although not a requirement. I like the Alpha line too.

Oh well I'm still running four 811a's in the 30L1 for now..can't kill it.

If you decide to make the trip, I will arrange for a face to face.

You did hijack Drew's thread, which originated with an antenna question, a topic that you obvious have no knowledge about because you were unable to provide any on topic information.

According the photo (http://i17.ebayimg.com/06/i/000/cb/2d/2695_1.JPG) that I found on a certain well-known auction site, all but a few solder joints had what I call "reverse fillets". The solder connections should have a concave shape but instead have a convex shape (too much solder). The few that didn't appeared to be overheated, with a grainy appearance. I hate to say so but, though you've had a low failure rate, they definitely wouldn't pass scrutiny to meet Mil, CGMP, ISO, or IPC standards.

You are right about possibly having too much solder... but that is certainly not a reliability issue.
Grainy appearance of some joints is not uncommon for the new RoHS (high-concentration of tin) solders.
As for passing military specs... that was never our intention with this product. Thanks for your comments.

Hello All:

Nothing wrong at all with the solder job. More is better in this application. And it looks good to me. Soldering for more than 40 years in all kinds of applications. Have fixed many electronic equipment by just going over the botched soldering job.

The audio set up can't be that hard. I would adjust just to were it sounds distorted and back it off some. Who needs a scope. I can't believe how many stations you can look at with a scope while looking at the IF Amp that the signals look NOT like the old ARRL Handbook Voice Pattern. And that's for all the guys on 80, 40, and 20 meters. Amazing how many do not know how to adjust the mic audio in, speech processor, and RF Drive levels to the amps.

Nawwww. It's probably Woger carefully enunciating his words in order to

LOL.

His website claims that Mouser Electronics is a "partner." Searches on Mouser for "Telstar" and "VoiceMax" return zero results. Hmm. . does buying some parts from Mouser make them a "partner." If so, I'm a "partner" with Mouser, too.

It seems that the Admin of the subject board is now deleting Mark's posts and then adding Mark's IP address to a block list so that he can't post from that IP again.

It has been a long time coming. Now all that Mark has left to abuse is RRAP.

No victory. The next time the admin looks at the board, he will delete all of your "silent night" posts and block the IP address from which you spammed. You can't win, you can only make even more of a Sorry, luser, but you left your IP address in the Google post claiming to have posted the "silent night" spam. It was "NNTP-Posting-Host: 69.19.113.131" and it points right back at you, liar.

You are simply a lying Banned Boi who can't understand Usenet headers and who always gets caught with your pants down as a result.

The dictionary defines partner as "One that is united or associated with another or others in an activity or a sphere of common interest."
So yes, in your example... you would be a partner of Mouser.

Don't confuse Mark with facts.

He is merely defending himself against all attackers, foreign and domestic.
Real or perceived.
His comment, "you guys cahsing at shadows" is but more smoke and mirrors, poor spelling and all.

Mark, to be quite banal, is an anal aperture.
He lacks the basic education that many of us have.

Yo' Jimbo! How the heck are ya'? Hope all is well with you up in the great white (any snow, yet?) north and that you had a great turkey day. I'm on the road for the holidays visiting kin folk here in the Carolinas and running through the lowland swamps doing a bit of hunting and fishing. Still waiting for that sunspot cycle to kick in high gear so we can get back to that long distant DX. Take it ez up that-a-way and don't be such a stranger.

Dude, I hear ya' on the sunspot thing. I can get some decent DX way out on the water but the "norm" just hasn't been there. I did hear a few players on the bowl the other day but couldn't get out with my rinky dink. The only fire-in-the-wire I'm running these days is from the mobile. I need to get a new amp for the semi-new boat but haven't decided on what to purchase. I saw the Canadian site that used to carry Griffy's amp (and a bunch of others) is no longer accepting orders but the European sites are cranking out the linears to the U.S. buyers. Take it ez up there in the Buckeye!

Mark is whining about it in his blog entry at http://khkb9rqz.blogspot.com/2008/11/well-congrats-nimnbuster.html

and he feels that he's the victim again. After years of flooding RRAP and other forums, he simply doesn't get it, and he never will. Mark is now booted by yet another web site, thanks to his own bad behavior, but that won't have any effect on his ongoing disruption of RRAP and RRCB.
Only sanctions will work.

So did Mouser assist you in the design, or put up money to market you splatter circuit? Do they get a cut of your business? Do they sell your junk in their catalog? Or is your only partnership just that you order parts from them? Do they even know what you order parts for?

Partner with Mouser, yeah right, just more telestar hype.

Commander... Like I said earlier... the dictionary defines partner as "One that is united or associated with another or others in an activity or a sphere of common interest."
I guess you're not able to comprehend that sentence. Not really surprising. If you're looking for an argument... I only argue with Hello Twist, nice to hear you in the pile bro. Yeah I'm on the fence with antenna choices and amp upgrades. I'm gonna try to make some smarter decisions this time around..and learn from my mistakes, but you know how that goes. Never satisfied.

Maybe not "informed" but ask people THERE, at Mouser, what their "definition" of _partner_ is and then tell them about this guy.

"Dictionary" definitions should not be confused with word usage within contexts that alter the meaning of words. For example, the word sterilize has a different meaning in banking/finance compared to microbiology.

In a business context, "partners" generally implies that an ongoing relationship exists by virtue of a written contract. If party A buys parts from party B, and pays for those parts with money, that establishes a provider-customer relationship, not a partnership.

I have their 2008 sept-oct catalog and "Telstar" is not listed in the supplier index at the end.

Does Telstar provide any kind of study data that defines what "maximum range from their rig" actually means?

And documents that the processor actually does something measurably beneficial at the receive end?

The last I heard a partnership required a legal agreement between two or more parties agreeing to be parters. It may be a case of the powers that be at Mouser asking themselves "Can I make more money off of Telstar by doing business with or by taking legal actioon against Telstar".

I once had a similar complaint lodged against me when I had my own business because my sign and letterhead read ....serving in partnership with a well known electronics supply firm. I manage to get away with it because they had sent me a letter after I had opened my account with them stating how they "anticipated serving in partnership with my business". I had based my shingle on this quote.

There are no federal laws in the USA governing partnerships.
It may be covered by some state law where Mouser is incorporated.
The issue is trademark infringement. Something most companies take quite seriously.

I hear you Jimmie, the simple fact is Brian uses google to cross post/spew his product. As far as I know they don't give a flying rats ass about usenet abuse.

I say no one is buying it anyway so let Brian carry on from his parents basement. No harm no foul.

It is not unusual for poor soldering to take more than a year to show up, with the products then turning up in large numbers. Poor soldering may show up quicker on heavy components, such as transformers.

It is difficult to be sure of just how good solder joints are from those photos, but they sure look like they were hand soldered by someone with a special deal on bulk solder.

So they get past the guarantee period, you can relax. Time will tell if they are reliable in the long term.

There have to be some laws that cover partnerships.
Otherwise someone could declare YOU to be their partner, go bankrupt and disappear... leaving YOU to pay all the bills.
As someone said, partnerships must be agreed on by ALL involved.

My concern would be that seeing these companies listed as "partners" may lead people to believe that the named companies have some authority or control over "Telstar". Should a customer be unhappy, those so called "partners" could get flooded with complaints or requests to deal with problems.
People may also see those companies as agreeing with "Telstar" products and policies, which could lead to loss of sales for those he calls "partners".

There certainly are laws to stop the use of a name. Alan-UK, who distribute Midland and Albrecht products, have declared war on people selling those products on eBay.
Aparently, if a customer cannot get satisfaction from an eBay vendor, they go after those who are considered "associated" with the vendor... in this case, Alan-UK.
The product may have sneaked in through another route, leaving Alan-UK dealing with something that they had no part in. They really cannot refund or replace something they didn't sell, but failure to do so could make them look like the bad guys.
Alan's rights in the brand names allow them to stop the use of the brand or trade mark in any way that they have not agreed. They have restricted the use of the brand names on eBay to around 6 retailers.

Regards,
Peter.

BS.

Look a little further...
United: In agreement and acting together.
Associated: Connected with each other.
Partnership: Relationship in which two or more people, organizations or countries work together.
(Collins)
Key terms are "connected", "agreement" and "relationship". These suggest an existing and continuing link, discussions leading to the agreement and more intimate knowledge of each other.

A partnership suggests commitment, usually in writing and signed by all parties. It works both ways, with all partners having some say in the activities - with goals, roles, policies, financial details, etc. defined in the agreement. There will be continual contact between the partners, allowing them to work together on issues.

Buying a product, using a service or paying fees to an organization is simply a transaction. Once the sale is made, there is no further connection between the two parties.
There was never a "relationship", they are unlikely to know anything about you (or the business) or what you do.
You do NOT act together and in agreement. They decide what they will stock and what they will charge, you decide what you will buy and what you are willing to pay.
If the two happen to match, then what takes place is a transaction. At all times, both parties remain independent.

Unless you and your suppliers have agreed to be "partners", are in regular contact, work together on products or services and have some agreement and commitment defining your roles - then you are NOT partners.

Being "associated" with the wrong product or organization can cause an organization to lose business, income or even investors and share-holders. Some companies could go bust if that kind of thing were to happen. If they had not agreed to the "association", they could sue the living crap out of the person or organization who caused the losses.

The companies you name may say nothing now but, unless you have their written agreement that they are "partners" and that their name can be associated with you and your product, they could suddenly decide that you have harmed their brand.
Don't kid yourself that a small basement "business", with one cheap product and an annual turnover below the minimum wage, will be seen as a valuble advertising proposition.

Maybe, you could qualify the "partner" suggestion, or use a better term...
"Trading partners". This would still require some commitment between the "partners" to trade with each other rather than shop around when they like.
"Our suppliers". Simple fact, right? Does not impact upon their reputation, but can show that you use well known and reliable suppliers to ensure the best products or turn around time.
"Our friends". Could be used for anyone who supplied you with information, feedback or any other help free of charge. This could show that you have secured good information, advice or designs.
"In association with". Be careful, as it suggests that contact took place and agreement was reached. However, if you see some design, business or other ideas somewhere - contact them and ask for advice or whether they believe it suits your application. If they reply, agreeing that it does, is that not now "designed in association with..."?
Personally, I would ask them for permission to use the term with their name on the specified product... but you're the original one-and-only "Grifter Man".

Regards,
Peter.

Hey OM

well I tell you what let's say a certain company is running racketeering like some big electronics firm.
This racket involves taking peoples money and laundering it then giving it back after it's been laundered. Now lets say you partnered with this company then you too would be guilty of racketeering which under RICO laws is a felony.

So in the end your so called definition of partner would fall under the guise of RICO and you will go to jail for a real long time and your best friend in jail will be bubba.

In other words your guilty by association.

Yo' Jimbo! How the heck are ya'? Hope all is well with you up in the great white (any snow, yet?) north and that you had a great turkey day. I'm on the road for the holidays visiting kin folk here in the Carolinas and running through the lowland swamps doing a bit of hunting and fishing. Still waiting for that sunspot cycle to kick in high gear so we can get back to that long distant DX. Take it ez up that-a-way and don't be such a stranger.

Waving four fingers and a fat 'ol (retired) thumb your way (you too, Moparholic) from Dixie! 3s!

Hey, Twist!

Good to hear from ya again. Been off the rec.radio groups for quite some time as it was really getting bad. Got another compooter. A couple of cores makes it easier to flip stuff into the binary bit bin LOL.

A good friend of mine retired. Sold his house up here and he and his wife moved to Tennessee. Got sick of the taxes around here.

Finally landed a really decent job. No easy feat at age 61 LOL. Back in the radidio business (I never should have left it).

Lost all of my e-mail addys with the new compooter. For some reason, Vista didn't like the stuff from the XP computer so I'm rebuilding again.

I hear ya' on the hash and trash in the group. Gotta point that beam in another direction.
Congratulations on snagging a decent job up there.
Especially when you consider the current economy. We've got an influx of foreign travelers coming down here and buying up a bunch of waterfront property. Them sons of beaches will eat anything they catch here. One wanted to know what manatee tastes like. I'm telling ya', I don't know what this world is coming to anymore. Let me know next time you're heading to Sun City.
Stay warm!

Translation: They found out what/who I really am.

Here are the amateurs who were present at the meeting July 2008:
KD8CTL, KB9RQZ, N8ZBJ, WA8JSF, W8ERB, W9VLM, W8ILS, W4KAR, WB8ZYL, WA8QNF, K6IPC, W8DAO, KB8XI and W8FWG.

So just which ones were threatened and how were they threatened?

From the minutes:
W8FWG. Glenn, WA8QNF asked this question of the President. “Mark, in the interest of the CCRAA would you be willing to step down as President of the organization.?”
The answer given by Mark was “No!” In view of the “turbulence” that occurred, the Property Chairman’s report (W8FWG’s report) did not get read, but it is included here as follows: All utilities within the building are operational, and the weekly routines are being kept up, the monthly check of the emergency engine was completed, an additional operating chart was made up and a new antenna tuning guide was added.
The lawn was not mowed, per the President’s request, because of his allergy to newly mown grass. The water leak at the roof has been corrected and one problem with a door switch remains and that should be taken care before the next meeting. Cataloging of the small parts cabinet continues, and now that we have a new computer this should be completed by year’s end..
A motion made by Glenn, WA8QNF and seconded by Roy, WB8ZYL to “Remove Mark, KB9RQZ from the office of President of the CCRAA” was introduced, and a discussion followed. When it came to a vote, there was one ABSTENTION, one NO vote, 11 YES votes, and the motion carried. George, W8FWG, being appointed Acting Secretary took ending notes. The next meeting of the CCRAA is scheduled to be held at the Osceola Clubhouse on September 2, 2008 at 7:00pm EDT. Since there was no longer a quorum (without a President or Vice President present), a motion to adjourn was entertained by Roland, KB8XI and seconded by Glenn, WA8QNF, and the meeting adjourned at 8:45pm EDT

Perhaps one could prove their disassociation enough to stay out of jail but your lawyer may be putting a new addition on his house and dedicating it to you.

Hello Mopar,

Well, I bought a new printer today. The last time I bought ink for my Leximark, it cost over $60.00. The only place around Rochester that I've found that handles it is Sam's club in Greece, NY. Since my membership is a month past due, I would have to pay over $100.00 to get ink!

So, I went to Rat Shack (right across the street from the Garden Factory where I was buying a tree). They had a nice printer/scanner combo for sale at only $89.00. He got a boxed printer and I asked what brand. Leximark. I told him no way, since ink was so hard to get - plus expensive. He said that I could get ink. I asked him if they sold ink. They do. Leximark ink? Nope. Case closed, I don't want it.

The did have a nice HP printer (with scanner). I ended up buying that for only $79.95. It was on sale as it is an older printer - but I can get ink for it at a number of places. Which means it will likely be cheaper to buy ink LOL.

Fortunately, the software is compatible with Win 2000 on up to, and including, Vista. I just got it installed about 20 minutes ago and all is well. New printer and ink for less than I would have paid for the ink alone for the Leximark. The Leximark did a nice job, but getting ink was a pain. And it wasn't cheap buying directly from Leximark either ...

ps - a raise at work. Now I'm making more than I did at the Yellow Box Factory. About time after loosing a decent job in 2004 LOL

How's your business going given the current state of the economy? For some it really sucks. What this county needs is more home grown businesses like yours to keep people working.

Grifter man,

It does not take an attorney to understand a dictionary and know that a "partnership" involves all partners agreeing to be part of it. Also, sole traders, partnerships and companies (or corporations) are different beasts. Sole trader and partnership businesses are very simple, they have few simple rules - allowing anyone to earn a living.
I can start up as a sole trader right now, if I wish. With one or more willing partners, I could start a partnership. I would not need to register the business, I could do my own accounts and submit them, I could change the business in any way I like at any time.

Trade marks, names, logos, designs, etc. are protected by Intellectual Property rights, copyright, designs and patents laws.

But in case you really do believe that it's fine to use a trademark, name or logo to imply association, try this...
http://www.bitlaw.com/internet/webpage.html
<quote>
Web page designers should avoid trademark usage that might cause confusion among viewers as to the source or sponsorship of the web page. Such use might well constitute trademark infringement.

trademark infringement occurs when one party utilizes the mark of another in such a way as to create a likelihood of confusion, mistake and/or deception with the consuming public. The confusion created can be that the defendant's products or services are the same as that of the plaintiff, or that the defendant is somehow associated, affiliated, connected, approved, authorized or sponsored by trademark owner.
</quote>

There are legal cases that hit the news, including ones for simply using a trade name as a search keyword:
http://www.out-law.com/page-2446
http://www.out-law.com/page-5242
http://news.cnet.com/2100-1030_3-5564118.html
http://www.out-law.com/page-9638
<quote>
It says that the use of its marks enables M&S and Flowers Direct "to free-ride upon the fame of the Trade Marks, thus conferring upon themselves and/or their goods or services an unfair advantage over the Claimants and/or other traders, and/or members of the public."

</quote>
Other trademark owners consider that it causes confusion when someone searches for them and gets some other Web site pop up. They find it particularly annoying when it is a rival Web site :~)

There are also cases involving big names busting, such as Levi Strauss' and Microsoft taking on Tesco (UK supermarket chain) to stop them from selling their products cheap.
http://www.theregister.co.uk/2001/11/21/the_tesco_ruling_what_does/

Only this year, Alan-UK (Alan, Midland, Albrecht brands) have used their rights over use of names to ban people from selling genuine products through eBay and Amazon.
<quote>
"If any of our products from the Midland, Alan, Albrecht brand are sold on either of these websites your account will be terminated immediately. All listings of our range will be taken off of Ebay and Amazon by Alan UK Ltd as we hold the IP Intellectual Property Rights) for these brands."
</quote>
http://www.alantrade.co.uk/
http://members.ebay.co.uk/ws/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewUserPage&userid=alanukltd

They claim that it is to protect the consumer, but many consumers believe that it is to stop cheap sales, enhance the image of "quality" through price and boost profit margin.
http://www.transmission1.co.uk/index.php?name=PNphpBB2&file=viewtopic&t=5996

But if you have agreed it with your "partners" that their brand or trade names can be used as on your site, then you have nothing to worry about. Otherwise, if you do get your nads busted then you can blame nobody but yourself.

Regards,
Peter.

Have you not already thanked everyone on this group, earlier this year? And was you not asked back then, why you are thanking us when you never asked this group for a name?

As you appear to have forgotten to tell us, exactly what is this new product? What does it do, why should I bother following your link?

> SoundZone is a reality!...

Oh, that explains it... a reality. I am sure that we all want a reality in our CB radios.

> http://www.telstar-electronics.com/soundzone.htm

Why bother creating a Web page for your "reality", then leave out important information... like WTF it is?

If your intention was to build up excitement, keeping people begging for the next installment of the saga (as done on TV advertising), then you have lost the plot.
There is no excitement in a couple of photos of PCBs. The response is, "yeah, so what?" I see no reason to keep going back to that page in the hope that you will - one day - decide to tell us what it is.

BTW: Your combination of text, background color and font weight makes it hard to read (at best). Some text is barely visible and totally unreadable (like the line below the "Telstar" banner).
The fact that browsers have "accessibility" options is no excuse for poor design, where the "Webmaster" has totally ignored the way the human eye works.
If I set my browser to ignore your poor choice of colors, fonts, etc. then it ignores them for all Websites. Why should people set their browser to make all sites look crap, when it is far easier to avoid crap sites?

I know, I know...
"Thank you for your interest..."
But it would help if you could at least appear to be interested in the comments of potential customers and site visitors, rather than appearing totally arrogant.
After all, if you cannot give a flying poo about site visitors before they buy a product, they have no hope of "support" once you have their money.

Regards,
Peter.

3341. Galaxy Saturn - probs with TX power

Hi

I am from germany, so please excuse my bad english!

DF5WW told me this forum, as I have probs with my Galaxy Saturn, that you can help me?

I get the radio now from a 4 years ago died friend from his wife now. The radio was not used for these 4 years. I wanted now to use it, but I had to find out, that it is sending only stable with maximum of 0,5 Watts
On "A band" with 0,1 Watts ... to "E band" maximum 3 Watts but in "E" then the TX is blocked. I have to switch it off and on again, or go back to "A" and push the TX for a short moment. I can TX on A to D for longer time. Only on E it blocks.

I have also an external watt-meter it displays the too low signal power too.

First I thinked that the amp is broken, so I have change the 2166 transistor - but nothing changed :(

What can I do to repair / fix it?
The mystery is: that I can not TX on "E band" for longer then 1 or 2 seconds - then the radio blocks the TXing. Then there is no reaction when pushing the mike button. I must switch off and on, then I can TX again. But in the other band (A to D) only with 1/10 of the normal power the radio must have.
When turning the power knob, the output power changes, so the potentiometer looks ok

I mad sure that the fault is not my antenna, because with other CBs I can TX and RX very good!
Also the problem apears with a dummy

I have the schematic/manual here - If some one has use for it and it is legal, I can post a link to it. Possible also needed to help me

Please help me! I THANK YOU !!!

Andy

Realign carefully the "circled blue" core coil and the "circled red" core coil in metallic case near the PLL IC. Your PLL is not "locking" the VCO and maybe the low power is due to extremely dirty output not in 27 mhz range, so your final stage is driven by noise.

I think HTH's idea is sound... along those lines... the local oscillator might also be stopping. This should be easy to confirm by looking around the loop with a scope. I also had another thought that your TX source might be intermittant. As you may or may not know... most transceivers have multiple B+ sources. These sources are usually engaged to various circuits... some in TX and others in RX. You should definately check these sources for stable operation.

Brian, now you are just being silly.

I have NEVER claimed to be a brain surgeon, you made that up.
I have NEVER claimed to be an attorney, you also made that one up.
I AM qualified and experienced as an electronic engineer. I have worked for manufacturers, service agents, retail chains and have run my own business. I have the certificates to show my training and qualifications in electronics, computing and business.

You, on the other hand, claim to be an electrical engineer. But this not the same as an electronic engineer and does NOT qualify a person to do electronics work or design circuits for use in radio equipment.
When, some time back, I offered to show you my qualifications if you show me yours, you fell silent. I guess that you had nothing to show.
Although someone else posted a link...

http://img105.imagevenue.com/img.php?image=97441_VoiceMax_122_173lo.jpg
Obviously, soldering was not part of any training you did.

You trade under the name of Telstar (there is another business with that name), but you cannot make up your mind whether it is a business or hobby.
I guess it's whatever suits your purpose at the time. When boasting or trying to impress, it's a business. When defending the "pocket money" income, it's just a hobby. Maybe, when it comes to guarantee and trading laws, it's a hobby?

So please, Grifter, don't try misdirecting the attention from your own deception by accusing other people of it. People who live in glass houses...

Now, as for the original discussion...
I have given you the links which tell you, very clearly, the legal situation.
All I did was suggest that you check with the companies involved, so protecting yourself from possible legal action.
If you decide to ignore the facts, then you cannot cry like a baby and claim that you did not know. These posts are cached and, should someone feel it necessary, they may be used to prove that you knew.

It is interesting that, after I post links showing the the facts, you launch a personal attack on me. I guess those links must hurt, yet they should not - they should help you to make sure you avoid the risk.

I have tried to be helpful by giving feedback, information and even links to the information from an attorney Web site. I try to help you, and you hit me with your handbag.
I guess that shows the attitude that customers can expect if they do have problems with your products.

Regards,
Peter.

What, like posting links to the information?

I gave some references, do yourself a favor and read them. They make the legal situation extremely clear, which is probably what's bugging you and Brian.

What is is with you and Brian, do you not think he can speak for himself? Are you suggesting that he should refer to organizations as "partners" without their permission?

Maybe YOU should be the one he asks to defend him if he does get in trouble, rather than the person who is encouraging him to protect himself by making sure that he has permission first.

Peter.

Rubbish.
Where did you learn about business and marketing, back of a cornflake box?

Brian is far from being the only person selling that type of product, the market is already saturated with cheaper and better products. If the audience don't get the message, then it is only Brian who will lose out.

If people cannot see a good reason to follow a link, then they will not follow it. You think it's just a link, one click, right?
But how many links does a serious surfer see each day? They cannot follow them all, they go for those that look like they will interest them.
Also, links in newsgroups are not always what they may seem. Not all links in this group have been CB related or fit for public viewing.

What made Brian's post worse was that those who did follow the link were still not informed what the product was.
I was not the only person who asked, but the more important question is the number who did not bother asking... because they simply gave up and may never follow a Telstar link again.

Another issue is that of thanking the wrong people, and thanking them twice. It makes the sender look absent minded, not fully in control and lacking organization. That point is covered in basic business studies, as are advertising methods.

Marketing is more than just spamming newsgroups or advertising. It goes much deeper, and bad marketing can be worse than none at all.

I suggest that you take a look at some media releases of REAL businesses.
You know, those who do not claim to be a "hobby" whenever it suits them and who actually make a nett profit above the minimum wage.

If Brian was using "good marketing", he would not still be struggling to sell
ONE product. After all these years, he should at least be living off the profit (look at his figures) and possibly paying other people to work for him.

> why does that piss you off so?

If that were so, he would be in my killfile along with so many trolls on the group who only come here to abuse people.
What I don't get is why you feel the need to speak up for Brian, do you represent him? Are the two of you... errr... "partners"?

It was not "good marketing", it was a lie. The proof came when, after posting that message suggesting that he welcomed feedback, he actually got real genuine feedback.
He started wailing, moaning, swinging his handbag and hurling personal insults. Then you wade in, making it look like he has or needs some "partner" to help him insult and abuse people.

If you think that showing total contempt for potential customers, site visitors, media, etc. is "good marketing", then you have lost touch with reality.

Regards,
Peter.

Brian, you need to read up on Web accessibility standards, the human eye and color.
I'll get you started...
http://www.w3.org/TR/WAI-WEBCONTENT/http://www.w3.org/TR/WAI-WEBCONTENT/#gl-color http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Rod_cell http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cone_cell http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Color_blindness
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Night_blindness

10 Million American men (7%) suffer from color blindness:
http://www.hhmi.org/senses/b130.html
That is why browsers have "accessibility" settings, to compensate for poor Web design which does not consider these people.

Your new product appears to be aimed at people with poor hearing. As these may be older people, chances are that their sight will not be perfect.
Yet you really don't seem to care.

I have yet to see a monitor with convergence problems, and it was not a common problem on old TVs unless some idiot had been inside it. Old CRTs are more likely to suffer from low emission.
Low emission can be cured, I have done it many times... with brilliant results
from a home-built rejuvenator.

We have several systems with a range of browsers, operating systems, monitors, etc. I have checked the systems I use, and asked others their thoughts on color. Dark backgrounds can be a real issue, much worse on some laptops, and one particular hate was red on black background.

At best, with a great CRT monitor, the line below your banner is a struggle. With some monitors, it is barely visible and certainly unreadable.
It is a fact that certain types of monitor, as used in modern computers, do not display colors and contrast as well as others.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Computer_monitor

Not everyone has the system you have, the Internet was intended to allow for different systems and browsers.

It's bad enough that some Webmasters think they can tell visitors what browser they should use... but you go as far as telling them to go get a monitor to suit your site design ideas?

I was just telling you about an issue with accessibility and possibly compatibility. What you do with that information is up to you.

I wish you luck with the new product, you'll sure need luck with the number of smaller and cheaper products of that type already on the market... and the way you respond to feedback.

Regards,
Peter.

Both the UK and America need more "home grown" products, but the problem is that the public buy the cheapest. That will always involve mass produced imports rather than quality.

A small "business", with sales which do not cover minimum wage for one single person, does NOT "keep people working". It certainly does not make a dent in the level of imports.

Once again, he appears to have chosen to start "producing" an item where the market is saturated. Existing products are cheaper and made by known large companies, who already have well established routes to market.

Unless Grifter Man gets some desire to make it a real business, then forget any idea of him fixing the economy. Considering the years he has been running "Telstar", with the turnover still being so small,
I just don't believe he ever wants more than just a bit of pocket money. Otherwise he would have done the market research first.

Peter.

Leland, I was fortunate enough to get a large order for my VoiceMax product from the University of California (San Diego) over the summer that kept me really busy on the weekends... but business in the past few months is way down. The economy is really bad as you well know. I think it'll be getting much worse... before it improves. I'm just hoping my day job holds out. They have fired 70% of the workforce where I work right now. Things are looking grim. I hope you and your family have a nice holiday!

You know one thing that really pisses me off are companies that hire people on H-1B and L visas then let go their American work force because the visa holders work cheaper. So I was thinking, while watching the talking heads on cable news tonight, with all of the money being handed out in bail-outs and bridge-loans to save American jobs really have Americans working at those same jobs? And for those that are getting fired or laid off are the temporary workers, visa holders, the first to go?

Yes, don't get me started on this saving money thing. The reason we have lost 70% of our workforce is becuase all our electronics (4 million+ units) is now being made in China at the Foxconn facility.
They are finding out that the savings promised by upper management... and consultants have not come to fruition yet. I feel that they may never get the promised savings... and they have lost many advantages of manufacturing in our facility. All I do now is attempt to solve issues with the chinamen via email all day... lol

Ladies and gentlemen of rec.radio.cb, the message you are replying to is a part of an ongoing campaign to disrupt the whole of sfnet, the Finnish-language Usenet hierarchy, by means of cross-posting Finnish-language garbage messages to other hierarchies.

Several bots are currently being run to try to remove these messages, but unfortunately it is quicker to randomly generate than to find and then remove messages.

The users of sfnet would much appreciate if you do not post followups to these messages (specially cross-posting to the sfnet hierarchy), the original garbage messages will be removed shortly. Thank you.

Therefore, you don't believe Amateur Radios death is eminent. Well, all of The individuals I encouraged to join Amateur Radio all but one is still active in the hobby.

One young man I encouraged to join Amateur Radio became an extra class in his first setting. A very Intelligent young man but when he met the other hams on HF and heard how badly they behaved, he soon quit and found another hobby. Plus, became very up-set with me for encouraging him to join Amateur Radio and this person now works for a local radio station as their station engineer.

Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, the FCC's Chief Enforcer retired from the FCC and once again the HF bands are overran with immature people acting the fool. This just goes to show if we need a full-time babysitter for Amateur Radio because our hobby is overran with toddlers then Amateur Radio death is eminent.

Therefore, in my personal opinion Amateur Radios death is eminent not due to Code, or Testing, or the Internet, it's due totally to the immature people like themselves that's killing off our hobby.

Admittedly different people are on the ham bands and I like to think it's because the whole country is different than in the 40s-80s. Maybe not a good trend, but one you may want to change with your knowledge and expertise as to how the hobby should be. You might be better off expressing your views on an ham newsgroup instead of a cb newsgroup. I suppose every avenue you wish to pursue may be to your advantage. Lots of luck to you and your new students......

As I said, I play all my videogames offline. A few months ago or so, I legally bought a perfectly legal offline videogame, "Sin episode 1:Emergence" from perfectly legal retailstore, "Half-Price Books". When I tried installing it on my computer, it wouldn't let me install it unless I went online.
Iwasn't able to get on thr internet at that time since I didn't have a phone line at that time. I thought "surely you don't need to go online to just install and play a offline game. Since a LOT of people don't have the internet at all and a LOT of people who play computer games don't have the internet at all.
although since I figured that someday I might be able to get back online, I kept it. Now that I have a phone line again, I recently tried installing it. It made me register for Steam first. But when I put in the key code number for the game, it said it was already registered and wouldn't let it play on my computer.

Steam's service said they'll release the codfe if you give them a copy of your receipt (plus some other stuff) within a certain time for any game bought at a retail store.

However, they wouldn't have released it even if I had returned it the same day or the next day, because Steam's service said they won't releaae it if it was bought at a store which sells used games.

So now So now I can't even play my legally bought videogame. And Steam contradicted itself since I did buy the game at a legal retail store.

It's both Valve and Steam breaking the law. The law clearly says it's legal to sell and buy used merchandise. Inclding software and other copyrighted material.

The law is also clear that once a copyrighted item is sold, that the original seller is not allowed to keep any part of the original and that all things with the original must be turned over to the new owner.

So by keeping the code number linked with the old owner instead of turning the code number and account over to the new owner instead of Valve and Steam are the ones breaking the laws. Thry're criminals.

They're the ones breaking the copyright laws. It is illegal to not transfer any parrt of a game or other copyright material over to the new owner when it's sold to the new owner and after it's sold to the new owner.

The law is also clear that signing a contract does not make illegal things in the contract legal. (despite what the videogame companies say).

If it did, then that makes all the CC&rs in HOAs preventing selling homes to people because of their race perfectly legal even though the law says it' s not legal, because they signed a contract agreeing to those illegal things and so they're bound by law to do those illegal things because if they don't do those illegal things, then they're breaking the law.

Nope. That's NOT how it works, even though it's how the videogame companies want it to work.

And since I can't play my perfectly legally bought videogame, and am out the money I spent, guess what?

Now after I finkish my Sims2 collection I already started, I'm never ever ever ever going to buy any more pc computer games ever.

And I'm telling everyone I can about it.

Yes, it's a shame the innocent videogame companies also have to suffer because of the guilty videogame companies besides just the guilty videogame companies suffering. But I don't have any choice.

It's just like when I was in school and the teachers would punish the whole class for sometthing one person did and said it was fair to do so.

I disagreed and I always said and thought I would never be like that.

However,as I said, now I don't have any choice.

And even if I did, I still won't ever buy another pc videogame ever again.

There was no warning on the outside of the case or box that online registration was required, and no warning on the outside of the case or the box that Steam was required. There was no mention of Steam anywhere until after I put the disc in my computer after I had already bought it.

There wasn't even any mention of it on the cases or boxes when it was brand new in stores.

So since there's no posssible way for me to know ahead of time whether a game requires online registration, or uses Steam or Securom, an don't want to risk losing any more of my money, I'm just never ever ever ever buying another computer game from anywhere, ever. And all you innocent videogame companies have Steam, Valve, Ea, and to thank for your businesses suffering and possibly going out of business.

I'll go back to the good old-fashioned board games we already have around here.

yeah, if we go by the excuses the videogame shills have already said and posted on the internet, playing old board games you already have is illegal and stealing from them.

They're full of a bunch of bull.

Even the MPAA shills in the newsgroups said that going out without any dvds of movies at all is stealing from them since they're not making any profits from you on the dvds they put out.

yes, the MPAA shills said not buying any dvd movies when they're released and going completely without watching them is stealing from them since they're not making profits off of you they would have otherwise made when releasing it.

They're also full of a bunch of bull.

In the U.S., it is NOT against the law to not buy something you don't want and to go without it.

Maybe it is in old communist Russia that the MPAA and MPAA shills seem to love so much.

Thanks to Valve and Steam and EA and Securom, I no longer care if ALL of the videogame companies go out of business and now will actually be glad when they all go out of business.

And since they have me so steamed with their illegal activities, I will now tell the cbers how to eliminate the distance limit.

Start a petition to eliminate the distance limit on cb and allow cbers to talk as far as they want to on cb, make sure it says both, get enough people to sign it so that it can be put on the ballot as a consttutional amendment. And if more than three quarters of the states ratify it (At least I think it's three quarters or more. I'm not sure about the exact number), it becomes law no matter what the ITU says because just like the videogame companies' illegal contracts and HOA CC&R illegal contracts requiring discrimination against blscks, hispanics, or whatever other races, the ITU agreement is an illegal agreement made ABOVE the authority of the U.S. Government.

The U.S. Constitution does NOT give the U.S. government the authority to enter into agreements or treaties made ABOVE the U.S. governmennt.

It does not even give the U.S. government the authority to enter into agreements or treaties EQUAL to the U.S. government.

The U.S. Constitution only gives the U.S. government the authority to enter into agreements and treaties made UNDER the authority of the U.S. government.

So that the U.S. Constitution is always the highest law in the land over Americans and the U.S. government.

So there's nothing the ITU can legally do since the ITU is an illegal agreement or illegal treaty in the first place.

They have no place telling American cbers they can't talk over a certain distance on CB when the U.S. Consttution clearly says they can if the majority of Americans want to do so by voting on it to do so.

The ITU is NOT above the U.S. Constitution, the Supreme law of the U.S.

And you all have Valve and Steam to thank fo my new attitude along with EA and Securom aka Suck-u-rom.

Hello ORG in Oxnard:

In the mid 60's my dear old Dad was the first to park his 21 foot boat there in the Oxnard Marina. And there wasn't much out there then.

The Boat was a 21 foot sport Fishing Boat. Nothing fancy. But it did have a Ford 292 Y Block "Interceptor" Engine in it. I remember the Valve covers had the word "Interceptor" cast or stamped in to the valve covers that were chromed. Many people say I used the name Interceptor to name my antenna, as its close to the famous Penetrator 500. Not so!

Ok back to the earth quack. Nope not felt here, sorry. We did hear it reported on the radio and I dialed around on the local emergency net and didn't hear any one talking about it. I hear it was 4.1 quake some were near Big Bear which I can hit one of the local repeaters there.

So hows it going in Oxnard?

You are the one making the foul noise. What he is saying..... rather verbously.... is completely valid! It's not like jumping on some P2P and snaking free music. The transaction he made is completely covered under copyright law. It's these companies that are pushing their weight around in the cyber world knowing full well that they have the legal might to drag any litigation far out into another generation so that nobody can afford to take them to task!

After installing Steam, it wouldn't let me uninstall it, I tried restarting my computer and got an error message whch said Steam was preventing my computer from restarting.

then after trying to uninstall it through control panel and add/remove programs got an error message saying it couldn't be uninstalled because Steam made a change to my computer.

So I went back to add/remove programs and tried to uninstall it again, but this time the "uninstall" option was gone no matter what I tried, even though I uninstalled many other programs fine several times before Steam was ever on my computer.

I still can't play the perfectly legal game I legally bought with mypefectly legal money from a perfectly legal store, "Half Price Books"

But I'm not installing Steam on my computer ever again.

I don't want that kind of spyware and malware on ANY of my systems ever again, whether it's computers, consoles, or anything else.

And Steam IS both Spyware AND Malware.

I found out the hard way.

As stated above.

And I'm never buying another computer videogame ever ever evr again from anywhere.

Some games such as Sin:Episode 1:Emergence requires you to put that kind of spyware and malware on your computer in order to play the game.

However, they won't let my computer play it even though I legally bought the perfectly legal game from a perfectly legal retail store, "Half Price Books".

And even if they did, as stated above, I'm NOT putting that kind of malware.spyware on my computer after I had a terrible time trying to unnstall it and the messages my computer gave me provng Steam was the culprit.

And it refusing to let me uninstall itself from my own computer when I wanted it uninstalled.

As far as I'm now concerned, ALL of the videogame companies can just go out of business.

they have gotten WAY too big for their britches.

But who are the clowns? The hams in Utah think the hams in my area are the keyclowns and lids guilty of bad amateur practice, while the hams in my area think the hams in Utah are the keyclowns and lids guilty of bad amateur practice.

At least cbers agree on what the proper CB protocols are nationwide, unlike ham radio operators who can't agree on what the proper ham protocols
are nationwide

Since peple didn't believe me, click on this link and take a look at,
I think number 7 and 8.

This is just one of the many hoas that now prohibit the actual transmissions of cb radio and ham radio, besides just prohibiting the cb and ham antennas.

Now again, what good does any federal or state law allowing cb and ham antennas do when the CC&Rs very clearly say that the actual transmitting of cb and ham radio signals are against the rules?

The reason given is it causes interference.

However, since you don't even have to be on hoa property to cause interferece with a cb or ham radio, it would seem that this hoa would also frown upon mobile operation from off the hoa propetrty if the signal can be recieved on hoa property.

Even though I didn't notice any rules at this one prohibiting mobile operation.

However, there have already been other hoas going after mobile operators operating off of hoa property even though the hoa rules didn't mention any bans on mobile operating.

And from what I heard, usually upheld by the courts.

http://74.125.95.132/search?q=cache:U75KrwckTRAJ:www.silveroakshoa.net/show_file.php%3Fid%
3D13293%26type_lib%3D22+%22cb+radio%22%2B%22not+in%22%2B%22hoa%22&hl=en&ct=clnk&cd=7&gl=us

And several people have already said that the FCC has stated several times that the FCC doesn't have any authority over it "since it's a volunatary contract" and is therefoe unable to do anything about it.

So basically, the FCC has admitted and stated that HOA rules regarding radio regulation outweigh and overrule FCC rules regarding radio regulations.

cbers dont agree on squat, keyclown. turn the cb on and listen to the sociopaths...I have heard people say they would burn another persons house down and shoot their kids as they escape the flames. THAT is the current state of cb radio...lots of fags, molesters, inbred jackoffs with teeth broken off at the gumline. Protocol my ass, the only things these idiots are "pro" about is threatening people, cuss fighting, and yelling out "AHHHHHHHHHDIO, AHHHHHHDIO" on the air.

3437. Palmdale California To Pass Anti Ham Radio Law

Palmdale, "Kalifornia" is attempting to outlaw amateur radio. The city of Palmdale has now passed a draft zoning law that proposes an enforcement unit that could seize amateur radio equipment and restrict antenna height to one inch above a fixed structure's roof.

It also applies to mobile and portable operation using an HT. They can even arrest you and take your HT just for walking down the street and talking on it.

I am not kidding. Here is a link to the actual proposed ordinance where you can read it for yourself.
http://www.cityofpalmdale.org/city_h...spl120479c.pdf

QRZ.com are leading the hams in a campaign to stop this law from taking effect. You can read all about it here:
http://forums.qrz.com/showthread.php?t=185892

There is also are some videos on YouTube from N9FAA about it.

Hams in "Kalifornia" and the whole country have to unite to fight it now!

> Dave m.

nope. Half Price Books did not do anything illegal, and to file a case in court against them (which I can't addord to do anyways) and win, I have to prove their actions were illegal. But I can''t because they did NOT do anything illegal.

But the manufactuterer clearly did.

And of all of the stores I've been to which sells videogames, which were plenty, as I'm sure you're already aware of, NONE of them accept returns on videogames. They allclaim this was at the insistence of the manufactutrer which put itinto the contracts the stores had to sign with the manufactuters of the videogames. So it does g back to it being the fault of the vidogame manufacturers.

Eveb Half Price Books doesn't accept returns on videogames.

And except for Half Pric Books, NONE of the stores allow exchanges on vidfeogames unless it's the exact same title. Once again, they say they have to do rhis at the insistence ofthe manufacturers. And that it's against the law if they allow you to exchange to it for another title (according to all the stores selling brand new videogames) because of the contracts they had to sign with the manufacturers before they could sell the games. So it still once againgoes back to it being the fault of the videogame manufacturers.

Now since there was no warning on the cases, how do I know that the game I exchange it for won't also secretly require online registrayion? Since most of the new games are supposedly using it, chances are very high that aNy other title I exchange it for aat the used store will have the same exact problem.

An d what about the people buying the games brand new from stores, who can't afford or don't have an internet connection?

When there's no warning on the outside of the game that it requires online registration, they legally have a reasonable expectation that a one player offline videogame will automarically work offline and not require online registration.

But when the poor kids find out they can't use their brand new Christmas gifts since theey reqyuire onlie registration and take it back to the stores for a refund, the stores won't let them return it, they only let them exchange it for the exact same title, if even that. And then the poor kids still can't play their brand new Chrismas gifts on their computers, since they require online registration on the internet which the poor kids can't afford to have

The poor kids are once again screwed over by the videogame companies.

So you trying to get me to keep on buying new computer videogames isn't going to work. Steam and Valve have already done the damage. Among others. As you can see, and already knew, people buying the games new also get screwed over. Along with peope reeceiving the games as gifts since the person buying them had no idea they required internet access since there's not any warnings on most of the ones that do until AFTER they're already opened up.

I even seen myself while at Wal-Mart, Wal-Mart not letting a person exchange a game who did have a valid receipt showing the game purchased there within the amount of time allowed for returns because of "it's against the copyright laws".

I'm nNOT going to risk LOSING any more of my money by buying any videogames brrand new.

Or used.

Steam and Valve have already done the damage. Along with EA and Securom.

It's too late now.

Youshould have thought of the consequences of your actions before imposing such illegal measures.

It's over the 30 day limit to return it to half Price Books and it is NOTmy fault because

1. Since there was no warning on the outside of the case or game itself that it required online registration and it might not work used, I legally had a reasonable expectation that it would work offline.

2. Rven after installing it, and finding out Steaam was online, there was no warning that it might not work if someone else had already registered it, so I legally had a reasonable expectation that I would be able to install and play it whenever I could afford to get back online in the futre.

3. Half Price Books did NOT do anything illegal. They legally bought it and legally sold it, both of which they are legally allowed to do under U.S.
law.

4. The original owner did NOT do anythingillegal. Under U.S. law, he is legally allowed to buy and sell it. Also, under U.S. law, you can not be held liable for not following the illegal parts of a contract you agreed to.

Just becauseyou signed an illegalcontract doe NOT make the illegal parts of that contract legal, just because the videogame company say it does.

If that were so, then it is still legal for ALL of those people under HOA CC&R contracts stating they're not allowed to sell their houses to black people or Hispanic legal to refuse to sell their houses to black people or Hispanic people even though Federal law says different because they signed a contract agreeing to it in order to move into their homes since there's almost nowhere left in the U.S. to get a home without HOA CC&Rs.

I think the Federal Trade Commission might like to hear about Steam and Valve. And maybe the Attorney Generals also.

Federal law trumps state law which trumps local law. You can write any old BS law you want, but that doesn't make it legal. It simply means you have to test it in court. For instance, the feds say you can have a 1 meter dish CONUS. Nobody can stop you.

The problem is the HOA puts liens on property, so you really need gonads to take on these jerks.

I usually don't hear any of that on cb here. So that says more about the area of the country you live in than anything else.

I do hear it occassionally here but it was by only one person around this whole area. Which is full of people.

He was doing it to just annoy the truckers and everyone else.

No, I don't know who he is.

I live right next to the interstate, and most of the CB transmissions
I hear are completely civil and polite.

Including the truckers' channel.

I have also nrever heard any of the supposed "10 meter cb intruders" or freeband operators even though I have equipment capable of picking them up, live rightnext to the interstate where it's "easiest to hear all the truckers illegally operating on the freeband and 10 meter ham band" and have tried.

I am able to hear our local hams on 10 meters, simplex, who are much farther away from me than the truckers on the interstate are.

I very much doubt that any of the "truckers illegally operating on 10 meters and the freeband" ever happened.

At least not to the degree certain people are making it out to be.

There might have been a few peopl who did, unaware, since they legally bought their radio from legal stores (before the FCC ever said they were illegal) and therefore mistakenly thought that it was legal to use any of the channels on it. Since they were never warned otherwise when the bought their radios and they're not hams who understand all the radi laws.

To the average person, if it's bought from a legal store, it's perfectly legal to use it as sold.

I think I was even taught that in the public schools. So it's no wonder that's what the average person thinks.

Also, the average person legally has a ereasonable expectation that it's legal to use any channel on it when bought from a legal well-known store.

Sure they can; all they need to do is pass an ordinance.

Whether or not someone has the resources to file a court challenge and fight it is a separate issue.

technically no they can't, Congress passed a law in 1983 giving the FCC full authority of RF energy also in the 1980's the FCC passed PRB-1 which exempts amateurs to some degree, for example any ordinance that bans all antenna violates PRB-1. Any ordinance created must use the lease restrictive means to serve the government interest.

Hams, and Cbers, want to really annoy your HOA?

Use a CB HT.

I just found this rule:

"There are no height restrictions for antennas mounted on vehicles or for hand-held units (CB Rule 8)."

So just put a big honking antenna on your cb ht (walkie talkie) that goes way above the roof of your house and way above 20 feet above your line without it being connected to your house at all, just to your ht.

However, I don't suggest doing it with your vehicle even though its legal. There's a lot of low-level bridges and fast food drive throughs, etcetera. And very dangerous power lines.

If you do do it with your ht, make sure there's no power lines or such around that it can accidentally touch.

So you don't get electrocuted.

The HOA would really love that one.

Oh, and IF the ham rules also allow any height antennas on ham hts, use a ham ht with a big honking antenna.

And if your HOA says anything about it, such as "CBs aren't allowed", tell them "it's not a CB. It's a speaker cell phone. Then right in font of them, proceed to call your ham radio buddy or wife or friend by using the autopatch feature of your local ham radio reprater so that the HOA complainer(s) hear the sound of a ringing telephone on it, and the person answering.

With so many people using cell phones these days, would a HOA even dare to make rules regulating cell phones?

Well, maybe.

I actually do have a speaker cell phone.

And also a regular landline speakerphone.

CBers might be able to get away with it using one of the new base cbs that use bluetooth telephone through the CB. Just tell your HOA it's a telephone,
then right in front of them, use your bluetooth feature to make a telephone call over the base cb.

Would the HOA even dare to regulate what kind of telephone people have?

Well, maybe.

I did already read one homeowners statement that he was going to turn another homeowner into the hoa and file a civil lawsuit against him because the other homeowner had a moosehead hanging over the mantle of his fireplace in the living room of his house.

What I want to know is, what business is it of any HOA what kind of interior decorations you have INSIDE ofyour own home?

What business is it of theirs whether you have daisies or tulips sitting in a vase on your ktchen counter INSIDE of your own home?

"must use the least restrictive means"

then what about all the previous statements in thse newsgroups that legally the local authorities are allowed to be more restrictive than the federal radio rules, but not legally allowed to be less restrictive than the federal rules???????

It seems to be if thety're allowed to be MORE restrictive than the federal rules, then the ban on ham radio in that city by that city is completely
legal, if the law passed.

Not true, many cities believe they can, but if you were to fight it in federal court, they would lose. Cities, States and Federal according to the courts must use the "lease restrictive mean necessary to substances governmental interest". There has been many court cases including Supreme Court cases and which the courts has ruled that is how it's suppose to be. That's where the FCC got that term in PRB-1.

Actually Federal laws also have to abide by the "lease restrictive mean" as well, although a lot of government agencies don't Technically, yes they can.

A city can pass an ordinance making it illegal to wear a white shirt and it is law until challenged in court.

And, for what it is worth, California adoptd AB 1228 in 2003 which basically makes PRB-1 part of state law.

Neither AB 1228 nor PRB-1 mean anything until a locality passes and enforces an ordinace contrary to state and federal statute AND an individual is "harmed" by the ordinance AND the individual challenges the ordinance in court.

well, that's a little different. If it's stated on the box in big easy to read letters (which most aren't. They're usually the very tiniest print on the outside or the very tiniest print in the manual inside that's still almost unradable even when using a magnifying glass), then there's legally not a reasonable expectation that they can use all the channels without a license.

Just some of them.

Theproblem is with most of the disclaimers being unreadable even with a magnifying glass.

And my Motorla FRS/GMRS radio actually says on the outside of the case
"no license required".

The reasonable expectation there is that a license isn't required to use it at all .

Actually, most of the frs/gmrs radios I've seen for sale say in very big easy to read letters "NO LICENSE REQUIRED" and only say in the tiniest
print virtually unreadable without a magnifyting glass, "a gmrs license is required for use on gmrs frequencies".

One of my local tv station duopolies also did that trick.

At the required hourly I.D., they would have in very big letters and logo taking up virtually the whole screen, the i.d. of the station that it was NOT.

And have the i.d. of the station that it WAS in very very tiny letters at the bottom of the screen, unreadable without a magnifying glass.

And no, it wasn't because of "my eyes".

Even kids with good eyes wouldn't have been able to read the legal
i.d. of the station it was without a magnifying glass.

It wasn't even as big as the print on this message I'm writing right now. And my computer is currently set on the smallest print the computer is capable of. !!!!

I also got the 404 error. His other link to qrz worked and I got this working link of Palmdale's website mentioning ham antennas dated December 2008.

This link is currently working:

Well, the line about it being a contract they have with the game provider is just simply NOT true. Stop and think. Do you REALLY believe that every game publisher has the time or money to make sure each and every game outlet signs a contract for every game stating that they will not accept a return? Please. Just because it was dayk when I was born doesn't mean it was last night! These publishers don't even want to take on the burden of the massive billing processes required by distribution channels. That's why they use the publishing houses and channel distributors!

They don't want to take returns because the channel distributors won't take return. It's as simple as that. You bought it, you are stuck with is and that is the fact of life. Only chance you have is if the plastic wrap and security lable have not been broken. because then they can put it back on the shelf!

Again, Look at the economics of it. THe game that cost you $40 was sold to the retail outlet for about $20. Now, do you HONESTLY think they are going to take that game back, give you your $40 back and pay shipping costs to send it BACK to the channel guy? Seriously. THink these things out.

Obviously. They bought somebody's stock in a liquidation deal more than likely. Who they tgonna return it to?

Tell you what, Ask to see the contracts. Call the manufacturer and ask them about the contracts. You won't even FIND a manufacturer willing to talk to you about a sale. They give the master copies over to the publishing houses who then print the boxes and booklets, screenprint and make the CD's... which are NOT burned guys... They are pressed just like records used to be. They could not burn CD's fast enough to make it cost effective.

It's like this. Quit buying. Like I have. Did you see what happened with gasoline prices this summer? People stopped driving and the prices plummited in just a few weeks! And guess what. If we KEEP off the roads these oil distributor assholes will have to eat their gasoline for Christmas dinner!

Believe me, If the buying publis let the next issue of the biggest and baddest sit on the shelves for say THREE weeks the marketing MBA's would be shitting bricks! It would cause not just a ripple but a roar.

But no. People will continue to buy and justify the sacrificing of their rights to privacy on the contention that they have nothing to hide so they have nothing to worry about.

SUCKERS!

Now you do know, don't you, that NOT living in a HOA does NOT stop HOAS from going after you for violating their HOA rules and that living in a place without HOAs withoutCC&Rs without anything stating that HOAs can take over later does NOT stop HOAS or CC&Rs from taking over your non-HOA non CC&R home and property. The latter has actually happened to me. So DON'T tell me it's as simple as just not moving into a place
without a HOA or CC&Rs. It's NOT. I now KNOW better. I found out the hard way. Which cost me a lot of money that I couldn't realy afford.

The following examples are not from my cases, however

HOAS have went after cell phone companiesfor building cell phone towers that were NOT on any HOA property at all.

HOAS have went after some hams for having ham radio towers on their own property where both the house and land were NOT in nor part of any HOA atall, and had no CC&R restrictions on the house or land at all.

The HOAS still put liens on those hams' houses for refusing to join the hoa and follow hoa rules and hoa CC&Rs, even though there were NOT any laws permitting them to do so.

My exeriences with a HOA/CC&Rs is a long one to tell, but to make it very brief in this message, which doen't even begin to explain the half of it, I had moved into the cheapest trailer park in that county. Everything was decent and the place was taken good care of until a new landlord took over and started imposing a bunch of HOA rules and CC&Rs on the residents of the trailer park where there had been none before.

The old landlord/trailer park owner was very upset about not owning the trailer park anymore which makes me think it was taken over by eminent domain
instead of being willfully sold.

The new landlord raised the rent the trailers at least every two months, sometimes every month. The rent went up at least fifteen times in less than one year.

What used to be the least expensive trailer pak to live in in that county was now the most expensive trailer park to live in in that county.

And it was now a dump because of the new landlord where it had been a nice decent looking place before the new landlord/trailer park owner .

Other people could no longer afford to live in their trailers. So the new landlord had their trailers bulldozed.

He also hired bulldozers to "improve" the place which made it a dump and ruined my car that I had at the time.

Even going one mile per hour, the and now scrapedheavily against the bottom of my car, and that was the only way to get my car to my trailer's driveway since cars were no longer allowed to be parked out of your own driveway.

When it was the cheapest trailer park under the ownership of the old landlord, the snow in the winter was always cleared. The place is in the middle of the "Snow Belt" here.

While it was the most expensive trailer park under ownership of the new landlord, the snow was NEVER plowed, and city snow trucks would NOT plow there "since it's private property owned by the trailer park's landlord. The city isn't allowed to plow there. It's against the law for the city to plow there without the permission of the trailer park owner".

Shovel it by hand you say? Nope. That was against the new CC&Rs. Because the only place you could put the snow you shoveled was to pile it upon your yard, which was NOT allowed by the new CC&Rs.

And besides, you CAN'T shovel ice which sometimes happened there in the winter.

And putting salt on the ice to melt it was against the new CC&Rs.

Some other trailer park residents fought it (the whole thing) in court and LOST the court cases!!!!!!

Since the place was no longer plowed, my car got stuck in the ice when trying to leave for work one day. The tire was just barely touching the trailer park driveway off of my driveway. Less than an eighth of an inch.

The new landlord had by car towed and impounded for being off of my driveway and being illegally parked on the trailer park driveway in violation of the CC&R rules of the trailer park.

Just because just ONLY ONE tire of my car was less than an eighth of an inch off of my driveway. While the whole rest of the car incliding the other tires were all completely in my driveay.

And AFTER losing money from not making it to work that day, I had to PAY a bunch of money to get my car out of impound. Money that I didn't really have. I had to borrow it from somewhere else/someome else.

And that's not even the half of it. It's not even half of the beginning of it.

Months later, it turmed out that the new trailer park landlord was a developer who was building very expensive townhouses right next door to the trailer park.

No wonder he was making it hard on all of the people living in the trailer park and forcing as many people out as he could and bulldozing as many trailers as he could.

After all, who living in expensive townhouses would want to live next door to "trailer trash"???

The interesying thing here is that the trailer park was NOT a dump until AFTER the new landlord/owner/land developer took it over.

BEFORE that, it was a very nice looking place.

SO DON'T TELL ME IT'S JUST AS EASY AS MOVING INTO A PLACE WITHOUT A HOA OR ANY CC&rS. I NOW KNOW BETTER. I HAVE ALREADY HAD EXPERIENCES WTH THAT.

As a followup to my previous post, we lost our trailer that was bought with our money since we could no longer afford to live there. And our trailer was also bulldozed.

As I said, that's not even half the beginning of it.
I can afford are
Which is why I never wwant to live in any place with a HOA, or CC&Rs again, no even NA's.

However, I can currently only afford apartments, most of which have some sort of CC&Rs.

This might sound like a joke, but it isn't.

You know those back up safety lights they sell to install in and on your car that uses the frequencies in the ham bands?

However, Burger King has signs up saying "no videorecording or photography allowed" and that "violators will be prosecuted".

So with that sign, Burger King is telling all of us that it is against the law to have safety lights on your car because it violates Buger King's rules.

They seem as bad or maybe even worse than Palmdale, California.

But you all just KNOW that sometime somewhere some city will pass a law requiring you to have those safety backup lights on your car.

Whch also poses a problem in federal areas where they say "no cameras allowed" and no photography" allowed since it's NOT easy and is actually a pain to keep uninstalling them and reinstalling them.

Such as if your city passes a law requiring them and you have to drive to your local social security office for some reaon, where they're prohibited by law.

Maybeit's an old retired ham or old retired cber.

To follow th law you must break the law. That is

To follow the law of no cameras permitted anywhere on social security/federal property, you must remove them BEFORE you get your car on that property, but by doing so, you are breaking your city's law by not having them on your car while on city property off of federal property.

But following the law to have them on your car on city property means you must have them on your car until your car is completely off of city property which means until AFTER par of your car is on federal property and you're now in violation of federal law prohibiting cameras on federal property.

Of more concer is where radio transmissions are prohibited because of explosives. But you CAN't just uninstall them willy-nilly. Its too hard of a job to do that.

And who is Burger King to tell me that I'm not allowed to have safety lights on my car???????

yeah, some smart aleck is probably wanting to answer, "Well, he is the king."

Not in the U.S., he isn't.

Seriously, in my opinion, the Burger King company,corporation, whatever they are, has NO business telling me that I MUST drive more dangerously.

And that I MUST risk running over kids that are too small to see behind my car with the mirrors while backing up.

Or their pets.

Who is Burger /king to tell me that I HAVE to run over innocent little kids because having transmitting safety backup lights on my car violates Burger King's rules against "no cameras, no photograhy, and no videorecording?????

Guess what? With those safety backup lights transmitting on the ham bands, even if I don't do any videorecording, you just KNOW that there's probably going to be some ham somewhere in his own house watching it and videorecording it from his own house.

Maybe even several hams at their own homes videorecording the transmissions from the safety backup lights.

So take that, Burger King.

Of course, with their sign, they have already threatened to call the police and prosecute anyone they catch with any kind of camera on their property.

Once, even while inside Burger King, the manager came up to me and told me to get rid of my "camera" that I had because it's against the law and not allowed inside there.

Until I then showed him that my so-called "camera" was NOT a "camera" at all, but an Icom IC-R3 tv set.

Yes, the idiot BK manager thought my Icom IC-R3 radio/tv reciever was a "camera".

Besides having signs up saying videotaping and photography are prohibited, Burger King also has signs up saying they have security cameras up (Well a leastsome of them do).

So Burger King has a double standard.

So here's some other things to Burger King.

Those car safety back up lights don't just transmit on one channel, but do simultaneously transmit on all four part 15 channels, two of which are ham channels.

And not only can hams pick up all four channels, but other people who are not hams can also pick up all four channls if they want to and buy
the right equipment to do so.

And maybe I shouldn't tell them this, but your own security cameras
Burger King uses can probably also be picked up by hams in their own homes
and by other people in their own homes who are not hams.

hahahahahahahahahahaha.

So take that, Burger King.

Now you do know, don't you, that NOT living in a HOA does NOT stop HOAS from going after you for violating their HOA rules and that living in a place without HOAs withoutCC&Rs without anything stating that HOAs can take over later does NOT stop HOAS or CC&Rs from taking over your non-HOA non CC&R home and property. The latter has actually happened to me. So DON'T tell me it's as simple as just not moving into a place
without a HOA or CC&Rs. It's NOT. I now KNOW better. I found out the hard way. Which cost me a lot of money that I couldn't realy afford.

They would do so over their dead bodies to any property of mine (were I to own any). Talk about your socialism, CC&R's are the very essence thereof.
Whatever happened to private property in this country? I don't recall that any law was changed to say that my neighbors own any part of my home (nor I of my neighbors.) When the neighbors are paying your mortgage, then, and ONLY then, should they have a say in what you do on your own property.
PERIOD.

You are the joke "radioguy" .
The Burger King sign says "no videorecording or photography allowed".

It doesn't say yo cn't have a camera or camcorder. It says you cannot take photographs or video recording. What's your problem?
Either don't go to Burger King r if you go follow their rules.

I was at the local electronics place for something to use for a random-wire and mentioned that I couldn't put up any kind of permanent SW receiver antenna. The guy there said one customer was in the same situation, living in an apartment. His solution was to do only mobile equipment, and he had dumped quite a bit of money into gear in his car.

The only way I could see doing this, was if you bought a smaller camper, and put all your gear into that, with some kind of pop-up mast. Then you could drive out to a rural area and have a comfortable, RF-noise-free* radio shack to have your fun.

Oh please. If you are outside the "store" you can record anything you like.
People do not have the expectation of privacy in public. This would include the drive-thru line at Burger King.

Burger King might be able to give you a trepass order and make it so you can't come back but I'd like to know what law they think you are breaking by recording your experience in their drive thru. I'll bet that law doesn't exist or doesn't apply.

What does this have to do with scanners?

And to add insult to injury, you'll have to spend your money to get your antenna installed, spend your money to fight the city's illegal rules, and then you'll have to pay your taxes.. which the city will use to FIGHT YOU and your antenna installation.

The Government(at all levels) passes all kind of laws that probably aren't legal or constitutional. They're supposed to at least try to pay attention to existing rules, laws, and the Constitution but frequently they don't. And then we the people have to spend our time and resources fighting the people we elect to these offices.

The real problem is no one pays attention to these things. Even if you manage to go to court, get these rules thrown out, the people who wrote them will not be penalized in any palpable way.

I had a HAM friend in a town near Sacramento who had to fight city hall on an antenna tower he'd set up. He had it up for almost 10 years before the city noticed.. and then tried to pull some permit nonsense to get him to take it down. Luckily he found a city clerk with half a brian, explained to them that the FCC handles these matters, and they left him alone.

Huh? You mean the restaurant doesn't own the property? I think they do, and they have the right to say no video recording on their property. Now if you want to step out to the side walk, which is public property and photograph, then you can take all the pictures you want. And by the way, you can't "do anything you want" on public property.

I don't see what back up lights and video recording have in common as
the original poster was complaining about.

Having safety lights that transmit pictures is photography, as far as Burger King is concerned.

I already had a BK manager tell me to get rid of my "camera" that I was NOT taking any pictures with inside since "cameras aren't allowed and are illegal inside here".

The reason I didn't take any pictures wth that "camera" was because it was NOT a "camera", but WAS a radio and tv set.

Lots of people take their radios into Burger King and listen to them with headphones out.

The idiot manager thought that my radio was a camera. And he wasn't a young kid either. he was a middle aged man.

I don't go there much anymore anyways, but it does have serious legal implications.

Suppose I'm on the public street and happen to get in a car accident that's not my fault, but is completely the othe guy's fault and his car makes mine end up in Burger King's parking lot.

I can now be charged with illegallyy violating Burger Kings rules "no photograpgy allowed".

Even though I never intended to be at Burger King.

Since "evidence obtained illegally" is not permitted to be used as evidence in court, I would then now be unable to use the pictures from the safety lights that would prove the accident was not my fault while I'm n court.

While I would be able to legally use thiose same safety light pictures as evidence in court as long as my car happened to spin and land somewhere off of Burger King property.

But if my car spins and happens to land on Burger King property, that same legal evidence is now illegal evidence.

Also, some Burger Kings also have the "no videorecording or photography allowed" signs posted on their drive through windows where you pick up your food.

If that rule was just meant for the inside of the building, why is it posted where the drive through customers see it?

And if it's meant to address just the employees, why is it positioned so that the drive throughcustomers see it?

It seems the only reason to have it there is if the rule was meant for the whole premises, both inside and outside the building.

Also futher legal implications:

I don't know why BK has that rule, but if it's because you don't want your employees photographed, get this:

A car with safety lights installed does NOT even have to be on BK at all to photograph your employees.

A car with safety lights installed can be completely on the city-owned public streets and as long as your employees are in sight of whatever the safety lights see, the safety lights WILL transmit live motion pictures of your employees.

And other people can then videorecord your employess from their own home by recording those safety ligt transmissions.

Once a viideorecording is made, it's a simple matter to make stills from that video or even simpler, instead of bothering to make stills, just put up the video as you recorded in, in full glorious full motion video.

Since no one wa on BK property, and the videos of BK employees was not inteninall made by the person with the safety lights, and thepeople at home recording were just recording tv signl they just happen to recieve, and they were not recording any transmissions from BK cameras but were recording transmissions from the safety light cameras, and BK has no authority over the person with the safety light cameras since they were never on BK property.

What can and can't be installe on cars is the business of whoever in the state controls vehicle laws, NOT the business of Burger King.

And I very much doubt that any city,county, or state would even consider, let alone passing a law that makes it against the law to have SAFETY LIGHTS that protects kids more installe on your vehicle.

And if some city, county, or state government was stupid enough to actually pass a law making it against the law to have SAFETY LIGHTS that protect kids moe installed on your vehicle, I think that city, county, or state would find theirselves in a unch of political hot water, a bunch of legal hot water, and involved in a bunch of court cases.

As far as I can see, I have not found aanything in my local city, county, or state laws yet that state having SAFETY LIGHTS installed on your car is against the law.

If they were, then why are the legal national chain stores allowed to kegally sell them?

Along with other stores that are not national chain stores.

I'm not sure if the safety lights also transmit sound besides just pictures or not, so maybe people watching the safety light transmissions at home might even be able to hear what your employees are saying in addition to seeing them, while scanner listerners would be able to hear them in such a case.

And all the while with both the car and safety lights never ever ever bein on Burger King property at all.

So take that, Burger King.

You may be right. That might be a loophole. It's obvious that Burger King's intentions, for whatever reason, is so that there won't be any photographs or videorecordings of their employees.

The SAFETY LIGHTS don't actually take "photographs" and don't do any "videorecoring" but they DO transmit live motion pictures in realtime which CAN be videorecorded by other people in their own homes.

Which either photographic stills can be made from or can be left as a videorecording.

And a car with safety lights instaled doesn't even have to be on BK property for such a transmission/videorecording of BK employees to be made.

If the employees are outdside, it will most likely see them. If they're inside, well a lot of BK is window glass.

However as I said, whle inside a BK restaurant, a BK manager already thought that my radio, complete with headphones, was a "camera" and told me it wasn't allowed in there since "cameras aren't allowed in here".

It is very obvious to me that I was not taking any pictures with a RADIO that was capable of recieving only, radio and tv signals.

And it's not just BK. Some other restaurants and some other places are doing the same thing with a "no cameras allowed" rule or a "n phoyography allowed" rule.

'ems some OLD hams. Citizens Radio Service (11m) has existed since the mid-late 1950's. Of course, it didn't start to take off until the mid '70's.
Within two years of that, it was already insane. It's a bit better now,

Okay. It should be said that when I first saw the safety back up lights for sale in the store, Burger King did not yet have any signs up prohibiting photography or videorecording.

They added that sign months after (maybe even years after) I first saw the safety back up lights for sale in the store.

So once againb, what right do they have to tell me that I have to spend hours taking the safety backup lights off of my car and run a higher risk of running over innocen little kids just because it's against Burger
King's own rules and illegal according to Burger King's own rules.

They are NOT the Department of Transportation. They are NOT the police department. They are NOT the Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

> I don't see what back up lights and video recording have in common as
> the original poster was complaining about.

Again, the safety backup lights I seen for sale in the store transmits full motion video pictures which anyone in their own homes can pick up and videorecord from their own home.

Cars with these safety backup lights on them don't even need to be on BK property to pick up certain BK employees and their actions.

And a bunch of other people sitting at their own homes are able to make videorecordings of these transmissions of BK employees and their actions.

And all the while, none of the BK employees or managers have any idea that they were ever videorecorded by anyone at all.

That was done by BK as a result of teenagers videotaping pranks at the drive-thru and elsewhere in the resturant and later posting the same on Youtube. Not so much for copyright infringement but more to prevent clownish young adults from pranking with cellphone cameras and the like. expect the rest of the fast food eateries to follow suit. They could care less about any arcane "technical aspects" concerning the (same) rule. Just don't let 'em know what it is and they'll just think you're a fireman or an EMT and your ham radio HT is a "portable".

Not only that, Burger King food sucks! Wendy's makes a FAR BETTER
hamburger and it's cheaper too!

So what's to prevent me from pranking them? Just today I saw some other backup lighs for sale, but this one with a honking big huge monitor.

Maybe I'll get it just to p.o. Burger King.

And drive through there where they won't be able to help but notice the picture showing them theirselves.

So hams, get out your ham video monitors, and cbers and everyone else, get out your part 15 video monitors. It's probably going to be a real show.

Of course after that, they probably won't let me back on their property. But who cares? That would be worth it. I agree with the poster who said
Wendy's makes better hamburgers.

They

I was originally going to agree with you. but then I thought no they probably won't think that. After all, the idiots already thought that my Icom IC-R3
RADIO WAS A CAMERA that I WAS taking pictures with!!!!

They "seen" me "taking pictures" with it.

I still wonder how since that radio does NOT take pictures.

And since I was NOT taking pictures with it.

Not even acting like I was. Just sitting there listening to it.

Yet plenty of other people use radios in there without any problems that I know of.

Who knows what boneheaded ideas they would think or come up with about safety lights?

they might think I'm a fireman or emt like you said. However, after them seeing me take pictures with a RADIO that does NOT take pictures, I very much doubt that they are that smart.

Firemen and emt probably won't even cross their mind.

It will probably more than likely be some boneheaded idea that sane people never thought of.

And if the honking big huge monitor showing them theirselves doesn't get them P.O.ed, it will probably at least freak them out.

Especially if they can't find the transmitting camera anywhere.

After all, they must not be vey smart since they thought a RADIO WAS A CAMERA.

And if any hams or cbers or anyone else records it,

Then we'll all have another "Whopper Freakout" video to post on you hahahahahahahaha.

A better prank just thought of.

Go next door off of BK prroperty, and videorecord them from inside the building next door or from outside the building next door.

After all, you won't be on BK property while doing it so you can videorecord if it's your house or the house of a friend of yours.

Then drive through there with a car without saafety lights installed, but a video of what you recorded of them earlier.

They'll probably really freak out. You won't get a video of them freaking out this way, but they also WON'T find a camera ANYWHERE in this case.

No matter how hard they try.

Ooopsss! Never mind.

this idea won't work. The problem with this idea is that they will think and say that your am/fm car radio IS a camera. And they seen you taking pictures with it.

Or that your ham radio IS a camera. And they seen you take pictures with it.

Or that your CB radio IS a camera. And they seen you taking pictures with it.

If it's a radio, then it IS a camera as far as BK is concerned.

Just like they already told me that my radio IS a camera.

that they seen me "taking pictures with"

Ha!!!

No, my messages were not spam. If you don't like my new crimefighting attitude, you can blame Steam and Valve.

Ever since I got ripped off by Steam and Valve, I am on a crusade to verbally fight all crime and ccorruption that I see or experience by verbally exposing their crime, corrruption, and illegal activities by posting on the internet.

I'm not taking t anymore. Too many people don't stand up for the real laws of this country anymore, which is most likely why things just keep getting worse and worse.

Next up on the list:

The illegal activites of Palmdale, California.

IF they are indeed illegal activities.

Which several people said they are.

But are they really?

hmmm.....

I'll have to take another look at their rules and regulations.

However, whether legal or illegal, they sure are making it hard to impossible for hams to put up antennas of any sort

Imagine if you didn't stand up for the real laws of the country and just sat back saying nothing and posting nothing and letting Palmdale illegally do whatever they want to.

you soon wouldn't be able to use your ham radio at all. Then no using your cb at all. Then no using your frs at all. But it wouldn't stop there.

Next or eventually comes regulating the color of the cell phone you can have. The color of the cordless phone you can have if they don't outlaw those first.
The color of your house. Etcetera.

And impossible to follow laws since they purposely contradict theirselves.

The posts about Palmdale on qrz were back from 2006 and I think 2002 or so also. the current one is current, December 2008, and even the 2002.2006 one wasn't the first time Palmdale tried banning ham antennas.

They also tried it around 1992 or 1994. I saw the posts dated around then.

It seems obvious that Palmdale is NOT going to give up trying to ban ham radio antennas or ham radio alltogether.

And did they or didn't they just ban mobile ham radios and handgelds also.

From reading their rules, I believe their intentions were to ban handhelds, but if so, they goofed as it seems to me their rules permit handhelds and handheld antennas.

However, if permitted like it seems to be, their intentions might have been to allow them instead of ban them.

But that doesn't seem to mesh with the rest of the rules.

It looks to me like they are trying to ban mobile ham radio operation.

What about those of us from out of town and out of state who just happen to be driving through Palmdale on vacation or for some other reason and have big honking huge ham antennas on our car since they're not illegal where we live?

I think It said something about them having to meet the vehicle code about ham antennas.

However, I have never ever seen any vehicle code mentioning ham antennas.

Of course, being California, theirs' might.

If their vehicle code doesn't mention ham antennas, what are the chances of Palmdale using that to say since the vehicle code doesn't mention ham antennas at all, then the ham antennas don't meet the requirements of being how the vehicle code says they must be, and are therefore illegal.

You have to remember, California is screwy. And Palmdale even more so, from what I've read posted by other people.

They said Palmdale is and was already a bad trashy looking ghetto dump.

And that a bunch of ham radio towers would actually improve the look of the place.

I've never been there myself, so I can't say for sure if that's true or not.

At least not without a big huge fight on their hands.

The latter is what happened to me and everyone else in the trailer park once the new landlord/owner of the trailer park took over.

okay, here's one the pro-coders either never thought of or did think of and just didn't want to mention it or post it at all.

Which I know is true in at least some people's cases.

How many of the no-code ham radio technicians used to practice cw/morse code on the old 49 mhz radios when they were kids?

Or on the older 27 mhz radios when they were kids?

Just because they are a no-code ham radio technician today doesn't necessarilly mean that they never ever used morse code in their entire lives.

okay. If I was a ham living in Palmdale, California right now, I would do this kooky thing.

The proposed law says antennas are not allowed to be one inch over the roof line at all.

And unless I'm mistaken, I think it says antennas on portable ht's are exempt from the antenna laws.

So I wonder how Palmdale would like itt if I sat on top of my roof with a portable ham HT in my hand, talking on it, in which case the antenna on it would be MORE than one inch above the roof line of the house.

Hey, they did say portable ham HT's are exempt from the law, unless I misread something.

When you're not allowed any antenna towers over one inch above the roof line, what better way to get better reception than to talk on your HT while sitting on top of your roof?

hmmm... another idea. I guess there is a better way. Nope. I thought of using an extension cord to set your base/mobile rig on top of the roof using a mag mount antenna on a pizza pan, while talking on it, but base/mobile rigs aren't exempt from Palmdale's laws and would count as an illegal antenna over one inch above the roof line.

Back to the talking on a portable HT while you're sitting on top of the roof of your house.

I wonder how Palmdale would like those aesthetics.

Of course they'll probably still try to get you for having an antenna over one inch above the roof line.

But you can then show them their ordinance that says HT's are exempt.

However, a ham winning against them in court when they revoked his permit for an antenna two years after they gave him one.. is what prompted them to try to pass this latest proposed ordinance to eliminate all ham radio they can.

At least that's what several people have said.

Agreed. However, Palmdale is shooting itself in the "foot."

For those not aware, Palmdale is adjacent to the San Andreas Fault. I can easily envision any and all amateur operators in the area REFUSING to take part in any emergency communication, whether practice or real, with regard to any disaster in the area. Palmdale obviously does not value the operators as a resource.

Note that Palmdale also went after TV and satellite antennas. Again, there are laws separate from PRB-1 and its state equivalent that exist at both the federal and state levels of government that clearly PERMIT these antennas. Practically EVERYTHING cited in the proposed statute is pre-empted at a higher government level. Is the City really that clueless?

I guess I stand corrected then. They are trying to outlaw ham HTs also, since they say they can confiscate them.

However, notice that they also exempted their own selves from the very rules that they are trying to impose on ham radio operators.

Also, they claim it's to eliminate interference to other electronics by ham radio.

However, as ham radio operators and some cbers know, lowering the height of the antennas INCREASES interference.

Why didn't someone tell Palmdale that? Or did they?

If they were told that, and really wanted to decrease unterference to electonics by ham radio, they would INCREASE the height linit.

Which they aren't.

If they were told that, and still DECREASING the height limt like they're trying to do, then it's obvious it's not about them wanting to decrease interference but is about them wanting to eliminate ham radio alltogether.

Palmdale: The ordinance must also provide a reasonable accommodation of licensed amateur radio operators and allow the rights of the public to have access to programming received through residential television receive-only antennas.

Me: So Palmdale admits that they must provide reasonable accomadation to licensed radio amateurs.

Palmdale: Further, the regulations were to ensure that residential television and amateur radio antennas are designed, installed and located in a way that avoids hazards to public health and safety;

Me: So they lowered the antenna height limits which INCREASES both interference and rf safety hazards to the public instead of decreasing them like they falsely claim to be doing.

Palmdale: minimizes adverse aesthetic effects; and is compatible with
the surrounding neighborhood by preventing adverse visual, health, safety, and other impacts on the surrounding properties and/or the community while at the same time reasonably accommodating amateur radio service communications.

Me: Then why did they INCREASE the health and safety hazards with this proposed ordinance if they want to decrease them?

And translation of Palmdale's meaning of "minimizes adversse aesthitic effects": "We don't want to see anyham antennas any where at all because we don't like the look of them."

Palmdale: ANALYSIS

The new ordinance permits the following types of antennas to be installed without prior approval of the Planning Department of the City of Palmdale. However, they may still be required to obtain a building permit from the Building and Safety Department. These antennas include: a) antennas that are installed, placed or maintained and used under the roof, or extend no more than one inch above the roof, or are behind and below an approved architectural feature and do not protrude above the highest point of the building and are not visible from a public right-of-way or other private property, including upper floors of adjacent buildings; b) antennas that are handheld or mounted on vehicles consistent with the vehicle code; and c) antenna installations intended for use by the City of Palmdale or another governmental agency.

Me: "Under the roof where they can't seen by anyone outside, no more than one inch above the roof so people outside won't see them, or behind and below an approved arcgitectural feature so that they can't be seen by anyone outside, only the architecural feaaturee which must also be approvedm and even these antennas might "still require" a "permit from the building department"

Did they just outlaw both mobile and ht operation with the above rules if the proposal passes as law?

It sure seems like it.

Translation of Palmdale's statements: We don't want to see any ham radio antennas anywhere because we don't like the loks of them and we don't like ham radio at all."

Palmdale: It also allows a single vertical antenna mounted directly on the ground or on a roof that is located in a non-residential zone or in a residential zone where the lot on which the antenna is located and all lots within a 1,000 foot radius are at least one acre in size.
The antenna is to extend no more than six feet above the main structure and must be located behind and attached to the main structure on the lot if ground-mounted, and on the back quarter of the roof if roof-mounted. The antenna is to be colored to minimize its reflectivity and blend with its surroundings as much as possible.
Antennas Approved by Minor Modification or Conditional Use Permit (CUP)
The ordinance then specifies the types of antennas to be permitted by either the Minor Modification or Conditional Use Permit process. The antennas permitted under the Minor Modification approval process are essentially the same as those antennas noted above with the exception that the lot size requirement of one-acre has been deleted thereby requiring a Minor Modification approval on all lots less than one acre in area. It also provides that the height shall extend no more than six feet above the main structure in a residential district no more than fifteen feet above the main structure in a non-residential district.

The Minor Modification process also requires that notification be provided to adjacent property owners and any homeowner’s association at the cost of the applicant.

MeL: So Palmdale is sating that if you want to put up an antenna, you must notify ALL of the aadjacent property owners. Of course their definition of adjacent is probably "everyone who can see it" instead of just "next door neghbors".

And at your own expense.

You know they'll want you to prove in writing that you notified them if some case or court case comes up.

Palmdale: notice will state that any appeal to the Minor Modification must be filed with the City within thirty days of the date the notice was mailed. An applicant or any interested person may file an appeal to the Planning Commission, of the Planning Director’s decision to issue or deny a Minor Modification, which appeal will automatically stay the director’s decision and/or rescind any Minor Modification issued and cause the application to be processed as an application for a Conditional Use Permit. An appeal must be filed within 30 days after the date of the notice. The Minor Modification will then become effective thirty days from the date the notice was mailed if no appeal is received within that time. If an appeal is received within such time, the Minor Modification is to be rescinded and the applicant required to file an application for a Conditional Use Permit to obtain permission to install or construct the antenna. If the installation of any antenna is not prohibited pursuant to Section D, or permitted pursuant to Section E or Subsection F.1, the antenna shall require a Conditional Use Permit approved by the Planning Commission in order to be established.
Amateur Radio Antenna

The Minor Modification or Conditional Use Permit applications for amateur radio antennas require the submittal of additional information related to the ham radio
Memo to the Planning Commission
Zoning Ordinance Amendment (ZOA) 08-04
December 4, 2008
Page 4
operation. The additional information will include information about the radio operator, specific information on the proposed antenna and site location, any structural details, any mitigation measures proposed to minimize any adverse effects such as painting or screening of the antenna or antenna structure, and a statement of the reasons why an antenna as permitted under Subsection E will unreasonably interfere with the operator's ability to receive or transmit signals.

Other information will include a list of equipment, proposed maximum transmission power wattage to be used, and a discussion of other available methods to accomplish amateur radio communication without exceeding the development standards which do not require Planning approval.

Me: When did Palmdale get the authority to regulate how much maximun transmission power wattage you can use???????????????

I thoght only the FCC has the authority to regulate that.

So now Palmdale is falsely claiming they have more authority over radio transmissions than the FCC does.

Palmdale: The City may alsor retain the services of a consultant to assist in the evaluation of an antenna proposal with the cost of such services to be paid for by the applicant.

Me: So Palmdale says you yoursel (hams)f HAVE TO PAY for the sercices of a consultant that the city itself hires and retains to assist in the evaluation of an antenna proposal

Palmdale: In addition to the standard findings required for approval of a Minor Modification or a Conditional Use Permit, the ordinance as proposed requires that additional findings be made prior to approving a Minor Modification or Conditional Use Permit for an antenna
or antenna support structure:
a) That the applicant has demonstrated that strict compliance with the development

standards specified in Subsection E would unreasonably interfere with the applicant's ability to receive or transmit signals, or that strict compliance with said development standards is not, under the circumstances of the particular case,
necessary to achieve the goals and objectives of this Section.
b) That the antennas, including antenna support structures and accessory equipment shall be located, sized and designed so as to minimize the amount of the antenna that is visible from surrounding properties, public streets and all public rights-of-way, recognizing that complete screening may not be possible

Me: translation of Palmdale's statements; We don't want any ham radio antennas visible at all.

the above is another of Palmdale's proposed laws that outlaw both mobile ham radio use and portable ht use.
Palmdale: c) That in the case of amateur (ham) radio antennas, the use permit would accommodate reasonably the amateur's desire for communication, while at the same time requiring the minimum practicable regulation to accomplish the City's legitimate purpose of protecting the public health, safety, welfare, aesthetics and compatibility with the neighborhood.
d) There is adequate space on the property for the antenna and antenna support structure without conflicting with buildings on the property or usable yard areas
required by other sections of the Zoning Ordinance.
Memo to the Planning Commission
Zoning Ordinance Amendment (ZOA) 08-04
December 4, 2008
e) The antenna would not despoil the primary view of a neighbor me: translation of Palmdale's statement: No outside ham antennas at all since a neighbor can see them.

They just once again made another rule/law, if it passes, that outlaws both mobile and ht operation. Your antenna must NOT be in the prinary view of any neighbor.

Which a mobile will be at some point while driving through the neighborhood, or entering or leaving your home. The same for a HT.

Palmdale: f) There are trees or a nearby landform that would serve as a backdrop to mask the silhouette of the antenna.
g) There are trees or other features in the neighborhood that represent existing tall features as part of the neighborhood character.

me: translation of Palmdale's statements: We don't want to see any ham antennas at al.

Palmdale: In granting the permit, the Planning Commission or Planning Director as the approving authority may impose conditions reasonably necessary to accomplish the purposes of this Section, provided those conditions do not unreasonably interfere with the ability of the applicant to receive or transmit signals.
Minimum Requirements
The proposed amendment also provides the following minimum requirements; however, the approving authority may impose greater restrictions as necessary to protect the public health, safety, welfare, aesthetics and compatibility with the neighborhood.
These criteria specify a variety of minimum requirements related to height, screening, operation, insurance, modification to existing antennas, annual inspections, and nonconforming antennas.
1. Height. The antenna shall not exceed the minimum height determined by the approving authority to be reasonably necessary to achieve transmission and reception.

me: Which doing so INCREASES the public's exposure to rf hazards instead of decreasing them.

And what does Palmdale consider "reasonably necessary to achieve transmission and reception"? recieving other hams from one mile away? What if you wanted to or needed to talk to people further away?

Palmdale: The applicant shall provide information and fund any expert evaluation of the specific site being requested as required by the approval authority to documentthe minimum height required to the satisfaction of the approving authority.
2. Screening. Ham radio antennas shall be screened to the extent practicable with vegetation, trellises or other means acceptable to the approving authority even though the screening may somewhat diminish the effectiveness but provided that it does not significantly impair the operation of the antenna.

Me: Yeah, that will sure help the signal from my 70 centimeter ham transmitter to get out. /sarcasm

Palmdale: 3. Insurance. The antenna owner shall provide proof of liability insurance in the event that the antenna falls and damages persons or property. Such insurance
shall be maintained as long as the antenna is in place.
Memo to the Planning Commission
Zoning Ordinance Amendment (ZOA) 08-04

me: So in Palmdale, if you have a ham antenna, you MUST pay for ham radio antenna liability insurance as long as you have the antenna up.

Which of course will probably be at least a monthly fee.

And you know youll need it from them claiming you're the one responsible for someone's sickness for caused by your unsafe RF causing it..By having your antenna to high where it causes more RF dangers to the public.

When we all know the real reason the person got RF sickness is because Palmdale required lower antenna height limits which increased the RF dangers to other people instead of raiding the antenna height limits to which decreases the RF dangers to other people. ;)

Palmdale: 4. Modifications. Any Conditional Use Permit for a ham radio antenna shall include a condition that the permittee shall report any changes to equipment or antenna structure from that authorized by the Conditional Use Permit and shall if necessary, obtain a modification to the Conditional Use Permit.
5. Inspection. Any use permit for a ham radio antenna shall include a condition that it shall be inspected annually to certify its safety and to verify that liability insurance is in effect and also that the ham radio equipment may be inspected without prior notice upon the receipt by the City of a complaint that the radio operation is causing interference with neighbors electronic devices due to the use of higher wattage than allowed by the FCC.

MeL Isn't this a matter for the FCC? When did Palmdale get the right to do ham radio and wattage inspections?

And to certify whether your ham radio is safe or not?

They probably don't even know all of the technical requirements the FCC requires.

And if there really is interference to the neighbors' devices, aren't those part 15 devices which by federal fcc law are REQUIRED to accept all interference they recieve.

So what is Palmdale doing investigating ham radio operators' radios in those cases?

When no federal or fcc laws are being broken by those ham radios.

Although there's plenty of federal and fcc laws being beiken by Palmdale in those cases, along with Palmdale breaking state law.

Palmdale: The City shall provide this inspection service at applicant’s cost. Permittees shall pay an annual inspection fee adopted by Resolution of the City Council in an amount sufficient to reimburse the City for an inspector qualified to inspect amateur radio equipment.
6. Antennas and supporting structures shall be a neutral, non-glossy, non-reflective color (i.e., earth-tones, black, gray) and be located in the most inconspicuous location possible to receive and transmit signals. An antenna which uses or is composed of perforated metals, radar mesh or wire screen, thereby reducing the antenna's visual mass, is encouraged.
7. Approval by the City shall not be deemed as approval by a homeowners' association pursuant to any covenants, conditions, and restrictions (CC & R’s).
8. Any equipment on the base of an antenna or antenna support structure shall be screened subject to the approval of the approving authority.
9. Anti-climb devices shall be installed at the base of the antenna tower if required by the approving authority.

Me: Then how will we be able to climb up there to make modifications to the antennas if required by the FCC???? ;)

okay. I know that's usualy to protect kids and other people from climbing it.

Palmdale: Building Permit.
When required by the Palmdale Building Code, a building permit shall be obtained for the installation of any exterior antenna. The Building Official shall determine that the antenna is in compliance with all applicable sections of the Palmdale Building Code and any local regulations prior to issuance of the building permit.
Time Limit. Any antenna permit granted pursuant to the provisions of this Section shall be developed and utilized within a period not to exceed twelve (12) months from and Memo to the Planning Commission
Zoning Ordinance Amendment (ZOA) 08-04
after the date of the granting of such permit, and, if not so developed and utilized, such permit automatically shall become null and void at the expiration of such twelve (12) month period.
Abandonment. The owner of a permitted facility shall submit written verification annually that the facility is operative. Any antenna structure and related equipment regulated by this Section that is inoperative or unused for a period of six (6) consecutive months shall be deemed abandoned and declared a public nuisance. Removal of the abandoned structure shall follow the procedures set forth in Chapter 8.10, Public Nuisances and Abatement Procedures, of the Palmdale Municipal Code

Me: Definitely an attack on all ham radio operators and all ham radio operation. What if you're sick for more than six months at one time ? Then you're in violation of the law. After all, we all know how all the ham operators constantly talk about their health problems and doctors' operations over the air. ;)

.Palmdale: Antennas and antenna support structures legally installed, i.e. with all required approvals and permits, prior to the effective date of this section shall be deemed to be legally nonconforming. All antennas legally installed prior to the effective date of the ordinance codified in this section which do not conform to the foregoing development standards shall be discontinued and removed from their site, or brought into compliance with said development standards within three (3) years from the effective date of the ordinance codified in this section. Those installed without required approvals and permits shall remain illegal and shall be removed immediately.

General Plan Consistency
This Zoning Ordinance Amendment is consistent with the goals, objectives and policies of the City’s General Plan. General Plan Objective S2.6 provides that the City should “Minimize exposure of residents to other man-made hazards, to the extent feasible.”
Further, General Plan Policy S2.6.2 provides that “To the extent permitted by law, work cooperatively with the applicable agencies and homeowners to eliminate/modify sources which interfere or disrupt emergency communications including, but not limited to, improperly installed or operated Ham and citizen band radios.”

Me: When did HOMEOWNERS ASSOCIATIONS get the authority to decide if ham radio and cb radios are improperly installed or improperly operated.

I THOUGHT that only the FCC has the authority to do that regarding ham radio.

Palmdale is a reasom why the FCC should have NEVER ever turned over CB regulation to the local governments like they did.

Palmdale gave HOMEOWNERS ASSOCIATIONS the authority to regulate and determine whether you are operating your CB radio legally or not and whether you are operating your cb radio safely or not.

And it all seems to be legal as far as CB is concerned, since the FCC gave local cities like Palmdale the authority to regulate and enforce CB radio and Palmdale allows the homeowners associations to regulate and enforce CB under Palmdale's authority to do so.

Palmdale: The proposed Zoning Ordinance Amendment establishes standards which accommodate amateur radio service communications but which regulate the size, location, height and screening of antennas which is necessary for the preservation of the health, safety and welfare of the community. Further, the amendment as proposed provides a more stringent regulation of antennas as is necessary in residential areas compared to nonresidential areas in order to preserve neighborhood compatibility and the open vistas and appearance of the community.
Memo to the Planning Commission
Zoning Ordinance Amendment (ZOA) 08-04

In addition, the proposed amendment, to the extent permitted by Federal law, sets forth certain standards for the operation of the amateur radio antenna to limit unreasonable interference with electrical equipment in the surrounding neighborhood which is incompatible with that neighborhood.

Me: So according to Palmdale, now even if your whole neighborhood is completely okay with your ham antenna and a surrounding neighborhood that is NOT part of your neighborhood doesn'tlike you having it, you're in violaion of the law.

Palmdale: The proposed standards require the submittal of information to demonstrate the need for increased antenna height and the operators ability to communicate in a reasonable manner without the increased height.
Further, Zoning Ordinance Amendment 08-04 is consistent with the General Plan Policy S4.1.1 which states, “Adopt appropriate codes to assure minimum standards to safeguard health, safety and public welfare by regulating the use and occupancy, location and maintenance of structures within the City” because the proposed changes to Section 95.03 of the Zoning Ordinance sets forth standards to ensure that antennas are located on parcels of adequate size and with adequate setbacks from adjacent uses. Standards are also proposed to ensure adequate structural integrity of antenna structures to protect public health and safety.
ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW
An environmental initial study was prepared in accordance with the California
Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), which determined that proposed Zoning Ordinance Amendment 08-04 to amend Section 95.03, Vertical Antennas of the Zoning Ordinance will not have a significant impact on the environment.
CONCLUSION
The proposed Zoning Ordinance Amendment provides regulations to ensure that residential television and amateur radio antennas are designed, installed and located in a way that avoids hazards to public health and safety, minimizes adverse aesthetic effects, and is compatible with the surrounding neighborhood by preventing adverse visual, health, safety, and other impacts on the surrounding properties and/or the community while at the same time reasonably accommodating amateur radio service communications.

Very disturbing is Palmdale's law (if the proposed ordinance passes or did it already pass?) which gives Homewowner Associations the authority to determine if you are operating your ham radio (or CB) within RF safety limits or not. And if you're operating your ham radio (or CB) legally or not. And how much power wattage you can use.

Are those people even going to know what the legal FCC rules are abvout RF safety exposure limits???

And if so, are they even going to follow them if they decide they theirsselves don't like the look of any antennas and so there should be none???

If they trylyknew theFCC rules and were truly concerned about RF safety exposure to the public, they would be complaining that you must make your antenna higher, no lower.

If they claim to be concerned about rf safety exposure limits to other people and tell you have to lower your antenna to comply with rf laws to reduce rf exposure to other people, then you know that they're NOT going by the real true FCC rules about RF exposure.

And know that they're NOT qualified to make such deccisions.

I guess I stand corrected then. They are trying to outlaw ham HTs
also, since they say they can confiscate them.

However, notice that they also exempted their own selves from the very rules that they are trying to impose on ham radio operators.

Also, they claim it's to eliminate interference to other electronics by ham radio

They obviously don't understand 47 C.F.R. 15 ("Part 15") which basically says that unlicensed devices must accept interference from licensed services. They've got it backwards.

From my reading of Palmdale's rules/laws, I get that even if you don't have any outside antennas at all and are only operating indoors, either Palmdale or Homeowners Associations can come into your house and deermine whether you're operating your ham radio or cb within rf safety limits or not, and whether you're operating your ham radio or cb legally or not.

They definitely either don't understand the federal FCC laws, or do understand them and are purposely ignoring them.

Don't mean shit any way, everything is going digital..and again ONLY the FCC has jurisdiction over RF and interference from RF

I just heard something said on the show that's on tbv here now and thought that's exactly what Palmdale needs.

"Whip them with the car antenna".

Okay, the exact quote was

"I'm going to whip them with the car antenna". ;)

So, you don't know who the lids are on Amateur Radios and why it's death is imminent. The ones I used to hear on 3,945 before Riley Hollingsworth took them down. These foul-mouthed people in this group who take the time to write words like Fuck and on the Radio.

This just goes to show why we need a full-time babysitter for Amateur Radio on account of our hobby is infested with foul-mouthed toddlers aka LIDS!

Therefore, in my personal opinion the LIDS in Amateur Radios will be it's death, not due to Code, or Testing, or the Internet, it's due totally to the foul-mouthed, immature people that's killing off Amateur Radio. So Amateur Radios death is imminent!

Hello gang,

We've seen the rec.radio.cb group go right down the tubes along with many rec.radio.amateur groups and the bickering goes on.

Just like to share something with the group. This city (Rochester, NY) has been in a recession since 2002 (according to the local newspaper). Employers had been running ads for toolmakers with a minimum of 6 years experience - and offering the staggering wage of $10.00 per hour! Toolmakers? Good grief.

Wages here have sunk to unbelievable levels with most folks that aren't managing to hang on to their jobs to $8.00 to perhaps $15.00 per hour - and most below that $15.00 per hour figure. Unemployment here was 6% some years back.

There is one very bright spot. If anyone has an extensive rf background, one company has been hiring. I was one of nearly 600 last year and they are adding more even as I post this note to the group. Wages are far North of that $15.00 per hour figure ... and they had a bounty on rf engineers and even well-qualified technicians last year. Thousands of dollars for a referral that was subsequently hired.

My suggestion is this - have fun and don't worry about the folks that wish to spoil the newsgroup. Even better, learn more about your hobby whether cb or ham - and bother learning about rf circuitry. This is one area that there are jobs in. Very likely in other cities as well as I suspect the radio shops are having problems finding folks. The shop that I had worked in was running ads last year and getting resumes from across the country. I think this may be a result of the Internet and cell phones which has resulted in youngsters no longer becoming interested in radio. It does open possibilities for those who possess the appropriate skill set.

Hope everyone has a safe and happy Christmas and new year.

73 from Rochester, NY
Jim

Wendy's uses the highest quolity meat then the other place's, but as far as

No. But as I sid, there are very serious legal implications to it, eeven if you don't go there. Such as if you're in a car accident through no fault of your own and your car just happens to land on BK property.

Aren't there other junk
> food places in your town?-

Yes. But they're all closed due to road construction.

They even have signs up on those restaurants saying that the restaurants are curently closed due to road construction.

The road construction there has been going on there for a few years now, and the finished parts of the road are now worse than before they began!!!

The road didn't need any road construction at all. Until after they decided and started doing it.

Okay, they're not all closed.

Some are.

Well, I don't care what you like for I have posted on newsgroups for years. I dislike having to always scroll to the bottom of messages just to read someones reply.

Consequently, if you don't like it then don't read it for I can careless what you LIDS like or not. This is my way and that's your way. I will not read those long lam bottom posted messages as it wastes time and hard to follow who posted what. Plus, I sometimes remove all, but what I'm replying too so people can follow along.

Now do yourself and everyone a favor - Don't waste your time wailing anymore regarding the way I post or reply for your whimpering to the four winds.

This too is also why Amateur Radio's Death is Imminent. Knit picking over protocols on the Amateur Radio when all we have to do is follow the FCC Rules, not someone's or some groups protocols. Protocols are just recommendations like top posting that people can choose to follow or not, where FCC Regulations YOU MUST FOLLOW or face FCC penalties.

Yet, people like yourself act as if Top Posting is a RULE rather than a recommendation same as on Amateur Radio and turn people off, this is why BLOGS are replacing the Usenet for it's Death is Imminent too.

Amateur Radio's Death is Imminent!

I think the phrase you are looking for is "I could not care less". If you can care less, then you must care some, and notice that in this case it is "care less" two words. Talk about LIDs.

Who is PKB for I do not have a clue and why dose it matter who I am? I'm either correct or incorrect about Amateur Radio Policy, and I am only trying to get a discussion going on the topic at hand. Amateur Radio's Death is Imminent, and by the way this discussion is going here it seems no one cares one way or the other. Usenet Death is Imminent too for I am receiving better response on web BLOG's then this infantile, spam infested troop of LIDS.

Define "Imminent" I have been hearing about the death of ham radio for decades. Everytime some new change occurs, somebody or some group comes out and declares that we are on the brink of ham radio's extinction. The bands are chock full of signals as I spin the VFO at this moment, it does not sound dead to me. If you want to stop the alleged death of ham radio, get on the air, it is as simple as that.
Or choose to not get on the air. It is your choice.

Mark, stop your whining, I have been gone for almost a year, and yet you still whine like a girl, you are what is wrong with ham radio.
And from what I read, your local ham club agreed when they threw you out of office.

I don't know who was responsible, but my hat is off to them, congrats on showing Mr. Morgan the door.

Cheers Jim. Most of NYS has been hit hard with the exodus of skilled jobs. Did some work in Owego at Lockheed Martin and I hope that facility keeps generating jobs. Saw the downsizing when working at Grumman here on the island. Worked there building planes but the powers that be moved manufacturing to Fla. Still some engineering work in Bethpage but not like years gone by. Now in telecomms which pays the bills.

Happy Holidays back at ya, 73, Jim

No it isn't that simple.

2. I read about another ham in a non hoa non CC&R place who was fined and sued by a HOA in a completelydifferent city because they didn't like his antenna tower. And it was against the hoa's rules.

He didn't even live in the same city the hoa was in.

His property wasn't even anywhere near that hoa.

His property was not psart of any hoa or CC&Rs.

The hoa residents didn't like seeing it when they drove through HIS city on the way to and from their work

3. I read about another ham who specifically moved to a non hoa non CC&R place and his place was taken over by HOAs and CC&Rs by land developers making CC&Rs that attached his property to HOA CC&Rs when there had been absolutely none before.

He took them to court and lost!!!! The hoa won!!!!

1. I myself lived in a non HOA non CC&R place which had hoa CC&Rs imposed on it after a new landlord took over. It turned out he was a land developer building expensive townhouses who had somehow taken over by eminent domain even though only governments are supposed to be able to do that.

That's what some lids do. When I turned on channel 19 on my CB the other night, it was Lidsville all the way.

"Lidsville is the koo koo kookiest

Lidsville is the groo groo grooviest

Lidsville is the living end

And if you ever go there my friend,

you'll be glad you did

Because everyone who goes to Lidsville really flips their lid."

"How's that for a topper?"

"So if you run into a bonnet

no, you haven't gone bats

That's Lidsville.

Hey Steve. Glad the rig is still working for ya. Since its snowing today I'm down in the radio room ripping out the walls and reinsulating. These 60 year old homes are a bit drafty. Every other part of the house is complete and now its time to wrench on the man cave hehehe

Happy Holidays all around bud.

73, Jim

The man cave is a must have after all your hard work on that place Jimbo.
So now you're building a sound studio to go along with that big radio you'ins have over yonder. I can just see it now, "shut that cat up I'm trying to talk" on the radio! :P

Santa showed up early and brought me a new electro-voice re20 mic so I'm set for this year.

Nice to hear from you bro.
73, Steve.

Fuck the cats, my dogs would dine on them and look for squirrels.

Got the TV and fridge in the cave so far.

Gonna go and look up that mic. What do you like about it?

Gave Enzo a coupla radios a few months back. I see him posting on the local sports ng's. Should hit him up to see if he got them running.

There is a Mother classic car show marathon on at the mo' on ESPN Classic.

Good hearing from you also mate.

PS. I'm sure Sharkie will be around asking why no one is talking to him :)

3574. the trouble with cb,frs, and ham radio

This sounds an awful lot like LID Dave Hall in Pennsylvania.

X-No-Archive: Yes

Yesterday, I rehooked up my cb, it was on channel 19, and the first thing I heard was someone calling someone else an ahole.

Then that "ahole" came on, and it was our local CB idiot who says on for hours at a time with about every other word coming out of his mouth being profanity and cuss words.

The kids around here do NOT need to hear tha kind of language or some of the X-rated things he was saying.

I sure hope they didn't hear that.

:Later, I turnen on the frs/gmrs radio and turned off the CB.

That was okay until the morning when someone started playing music on frs channel 1.

I might have said something except my frs/gmrs is 600 milliwatts on the frs/gmrsinstead of 500 milliwatts. And I don't have a license yet to transmit over 500 milliwatts on those channels and don't want to get one unless I get a good GMRS radio, a full 50 watts (out of the price range of what I can afford) or a 5 watt with a detachable antenna. So I didn't say anything on that channel.

Why emergency services on FRS is not a good idea.

One day, I loaned my frs radios to my neices (kids) and their dad. One of them then started pretending over the air like they were in the military being attacked by terrorists.

Nope. It wasn't the kids. It was their dad. So much for loaning your two-way radios to your "adult" brother-in-law.

With ham radio, the problem is the self-appointed radio cops who think they know everything when in fact they know nothing.

A friend of mine moved ffrom here to south carolina and when she came back here, her accent had changed to a south carolina.

From what I read, that's normal when people move to somewhere else. Their accent and language eventually changes to where they moved to.

The self-appointed radio cops hear someone from or living in the Appalachian mountains (even if they're not originally from there) saying "I'm going to go get me some dope now" or "I'm a gonna have me some dope now".

The next thing they know, the self-appointed radio cop has turned them into the federal government for illegal drug trafficking. And for using federally illegal drugs.

Whn in fact, no ssuch thing ever happened.

Then in court, the judge asks if they reallydid say "I'm gonna get me some dope". If trying to explain, they're responded to by the judge with "Just answer yes or no. Nothing else. Just yes or no. Did you say you were going to get some dope"

If honest, he answers yes, and ends up in federal prison for a crime he never ever committed just because of some smart-aleck know-it-all self-appointed radio cop who actually knows nothing.

In Appalachia, "dope" is commonly used to refer to any and all soft drinks, also known as soda pop in other parts of the country.

In some parts of the south, "Coke is used to mean any soft drink regardless of the brand.

There, a "Pepsi" is a "Coke".

So I'm guessing that maybe "dope" to mean "soda pop" in Appalachia came about because of Coca-Cola having cocaine in it in it's early days. And just stuck as part of the language.

Although I don't know if that's really where the word to mean that came from or not. Just my guess.

Okay, Dude. I admit it. I have some Appalachian background in my ancestry.

I eard from my relatives that other relatives of mine had a real hillbilly car.

You know, the kind that's all rusted out with the doors ready to fall off.

And I think cracked windows.

People thought that car would never ever make it back to California.

However, they hooked it up to a Greyhound Bus and made it back.

Of course, by the time the car got there, the tires and car were all burnt up.

But hey, they made it back to California in that car.

hmmmm... Dude, you said you're a redneck from California.

Was that you or your family or your relativves?

If so, we just might be cousins.

hahahahahahahah.

Some hams complain cbers run way more power than necessarry.

I say hogwash. I have listened and most cbers run completely legal power.

However, You're definitely running too much power if your cb antenna looks like this while you transmit.

However, if it does, your HOA nimbys won't even dare to sneak onto your property to sneakily take your cb antenna down.

Click on the link and wait for the picture.

Nah, he's in Australia. Here in the U.S., it won't be the FCC - it'll be the EPA because they'll smell the ozone for a good mile radius LOL.

Any real old-timers around that used to watch "I've got a secret"? The one back in the late 50's or so. If so, do you remember the guy that stood on one of those things and let 1,000,000 volts of electricity pass through his body? I remember that wooden 2X4 he held in his hand - and it showed burning along one of its' sides. Now that, to me, defined balls of steel LOL.

Despite my liberal leanings, I agree with you, Brenda Ann.
Responsibly-wrought Zoning ordinances are one thing - fussy NIMBY CC&Rs are another. I live in an HOA that is not bad (we have no antenna restrictions that I know of). Some are not so lucky, but frankly, I've been told by County attorneys that it is pretty hard to make a CC&R-related "violation" stick in court. Still, one may have to go through the trouble to challenge them.

I read recent messages by hams claiming that there are 40 and only 40 cb channels.

Well, that just ain't true. They either have something up their butt against cbers (which is the case with that particular poster) or else they are not up to date on radio services other than their own.

Just take a look at what the FCC says. I remember when there were only 23 CB channels, then there were 40, and according to the FCC, there are now 59.

The extra 19 channels are 151.820 mhz (murs 1) 151.880 mhz (murs 2) 151.940 mhz (murs 3) 154.570 mhz (murs 4) 154.600 mhz (murs 5) all with two watts power output and detachable antennas allowed so you can put up a base antenna as high as legally allowed.

FRS channela 1 through 7 shared with gmrs users (no detachable antenna and only half a watt unless you have a gmrs license in which case you can have a detachable antenna and operate up to five watts with a base antenna as high as legally allowed.

FRS channels 8 through 14 at only half a watt and no detachable antenna allowed.

You say but all those are low powered and you need high powered.

If you get a gmrs license than you are legally allowed to operatee up to fifty watts on what most frs/.gmrs radios I've seen call channels 15 through 22, although those particular radios won't do fifty watts.

Just get one capable of doing fifty watts along with the appropriate license and you're all set.

You say but you don't want to study to take a test.

No problem. GMRS doesn't require a test. You just send your application for a license in along with your check or money order to the FCC every five years (well, currently it's every five years), and once they approve your license, you're all set for at least five years.

I remember the reason the FCC gave me when they sent my check for 27 mhz cb license back to me and said a license is no longer required. and it wasn't for the reason most hams and peoleposting on the ham and cb groups say it was.

It was because the FCC was swamped with too much paperwork from all the applications for CB they were recieving since CB was so popular back then.

That's the real reason CB licensing was discontinued, The FCC even said so in the letter they sent me.

Not because of most people ignoring the 27 mhz license requirements, but because most people followed the 27 mhz CB license requirements.

And that is the real reason the FCC stopped issuing CB licenses.

Note the above is only about people applying for licenses back then and why the FCC discontinued CBlicensing back then, not about how people were or were not behaving on the air back then.

Well, from what I and other people saw in Palmdale's ordinace, it looks like they're outlawing mobile use of ham radio also.

And I know that according to it, the ordinance gives Palmdale the authority to tell you how mucch power you are and aren't allowed to run while transmitting on your ham radio.

I thought only the FCC had that authority.

How can Palmdale legally require you to not transmit over three watts when the FCC clearly says you can legally transmit with up to one thousand five hundred watts.

How can Palmdale legally say you're not allowed to transmit with one thousand five hundred watts when the FCC clearly says you are legally allowed to???

It can do something similar. Just for kicks take the adjustable stainless tip off of a mobile antenna and replace the tip with a similar length of copper wire. It will only take about 200 watts to light up the tip of the copper wire. It will burn green.

The problem with your logic chain starts with the assumption that federal law supercedes state laws. In some types of statues dealing with universal rights (freedom to vote, anti-segregation and other types of statues relating to civil rights) it does. When it comes to general regulations, deference is given to state and localities. Conservatives have long trumpeted this division of deference to be the linchpin of shared federalism between the national gov't and states.

Study constitutional law, it matters!

Irregardless of the ecpa, try to listen in on military tactical comms and let them find out about it.. they tend to call that espionage. Which is why most scanners don't have the tactical freqs. in them...

Also, it depends upon your USE of the intercepted comms. There is an enhancement for using a police scanner in furtherance of a crime.

Yes you should,
Ever hear of the commerce clause?

There are thousands of Federal laws that trump State laws.

The bad part about the issues at hand is the state can confiscate your stuff.
and you have to spend thousands to prove they were wrong.

Federal law does trump local law; however you have to have a federal law to trump that state law.

All of this has to do with regulating outside antennas and localities being 'forced' to reasonably accommodate hams.

I don't believe there are any federal laws exempting hams from local laws prohibiting reception of signals outside of their assigned amateur bands. Some states do have laws exempting hams from their laws concerning this - but there are no federal laws concerning reception (except the cell phone reception thing).

Best bet is to be aware of local laws.

One example of a similar situation not related to radio .... I went to purchase a flag a few years back. The store owner tried to tack on the 8% state and county tax. Uh, uh pal. Federal law exempts U.S. flags from any sales tax. The owner removed the tax. That said, localities and states can tax pretty much whatever they wish. But not flags as there is a specific federal law preventing it.

It works both ways there are Federal laws that overule state laws and stae laws that overule federal laws. Kidnapping is a state crime but made federal if you cross a state line with the victim. All federal civil rights laws trump state laws unless the state's is more liberal.
I think most federal laws have a clause stating how they relate to state laws. As clear as mud isnt it. The American Civil Liberties Union is the place to contact tfor information on specific laws. I believe they have already been involved in some cases in Virginia.

They're not. Neither are radar detectors or full range radio receivers of any sort (including cell phone coverage). The latter "restriction" bought and paid for by the same telcos that have been illegally tapping your phone lines for the past 8+ years. Of course, if never challenged, they'll take as many of your freedoms as you'll give.

Federal law and International Treaty clearly state that monitoring any frequency is legal.

As a result of 28 years of military service and losing a home to Hurricane Katrina, I have moved a lot -- 29 moves since 1967. I have bought and sold six houses and built three. IN EVERY CASE where there was a HOA or POA, I asked the real estate agent with whom I was working to give me a copy of the covenants and I had them within hours.

HOA/POA CC&R are public information, on file in your local courthouse along with the deeds and property transfer records.

Also, you could simply knock on the door of a home in the neighborhood, introduce yourself, find out who is the HOA president, and ask him/her for a copy.

Not according to the courts and law here. After the courthouse clerks' claims, I looked up the law on the internet and there really is an actual law herewhich makes it illegal for the courthouse employees or anyone else to give you a copy of those recods unless it's to a lawyer who has requested them, and makes it illegal for you to recieve a copy of tem by anyone unless you have a lawyer to get them. They're not public records since the public is NOT allowed to get copies of them, only lawyers are. I also thought they were public records from what everyone else was saying on the internet, until I actualy found out otherwise by actually being down at the courthouse.

So once again, just because I'm not rich enough to hire a lawyer, there is no freaking possible way I can find out what any CC&R restrictions are or even whether there's a hoa or not in the place I'm moving into until AFTER I have already signed an agreement to move in there.

Since they don't give you copies of the CC&Rs unti AFTER you have already agreed to move in and since you can't get copies off CC&Rs before you make an agreement to move in and can't even find out if there is even a hoa there or not before you move in since it is illegal to do so since they are NOT public records, by law.

This is just more of the usual government discrimination against poor people since poor people are not allowed to get copies of HOA or CC&R restrictions before they make an agreement to move into any place while rich people are allowed to get such copies before making an agreement to move into any place since they can afford a lawyer who are the only ones allowed to request and get such documents.

then the hoa nazis finee you for not wearing the clothes they want you to be wearing, for things you do INSIDE of your own home even where they can't see what you're doing, and for eating normal American food here in America since it made one non-American family living in a HOA here in America sick and nauseous to see Americans eating American food.

So the American family had to eat only non-American foods that the other hoa family agreed with which the American family wasnt used to and made the American family sick and nauseous because of hoa rules that that was the only food they were allowed to eat in their own home from now on.

From my understanding, it was a completely separate house, not a condo or townhome.

And hams, that does have to do with ham radio. I just forgot to put that in my first post since I was tired. See below.

You don't see me going over to the Arab countries and telling them they have to stop eating goats eyes and such stuff just becauser it makes me sick and nauseous to see that.

And it doesn't even have to be THAT foreign.

You don't see me over in Australia telling them that they all have to stop eatng Vegemite just because it makes us Americans sick and nauseous to see them eating it.

My mom and step--dad threw out Vegemite I ordered because it made her sick from the looks of it. Both her and my step-dad both thought it was food that had went bad and rotted while being mailed to me.

I thought it never arrived until after finding out she threw it out.and

After getting another shipment and telling them it's supposed to look like that, they still threw it out after making them sick and nauseous after tasting it. Saying that it tasted like motor oil, and that I was wrong and they could tell it was rotten from the taste of it. They said it was the worst thing they ever tasted in their entire lives.

After getting another shipmenr, I tasted it, yes on what you're supposed to put it on, and they were correct. It tastes like motor oil.

But do you see meover in Australia telling all the Australians whileI'm there that they're not allowed to eat any of the Vegemite they like just because I don't like it and makes all the Americans I know sick and nauseous to see them eating it?

No. If I went over there or even moved over there, I wouldn't expect them to change their own culture and habits just because one American non-Australian family who recently moved to Australia finds it sickening and disgusting.

What does this have to do with ham antennas. Simple. The American hoa did not have any rules against Americans cooking American food so they fined the family for cooking American food under the "air pollution" rules the hoa had.

So even if your hoa did not have any restrictions against any antennas of any kind at all, you're still not safe since they will simply fine you for breaking the hoa rules against "no air pollution" since it's a "well known fact" by all the "experts" that "the mere presence of an antenna caused RF air pollution whether you're transmitting or not" causing everyone to get radio and tv interference and rf sickness.

I recently read posts by people in charge of hoas, and did NOT like what I seen.

The one asked other hoa presidents "what do you do when a minority of the homeowners want you to follow the law?"

That tells me the people in charge of hoas do not care about following the federal, state, and locall aw theirselves, but will fine anyone who doesn't follow the hoa "laws".

Another one in charge of hoas mentioned "that pesky U.S. Constitution" which tells me the same as above plus telling me that the people in charge of hoas are communists and nazis both of whom want to continously order people what to do in their own private lives in their own private homes and both are traitors to the U.S., U.S. Constitutin, and the standard American way of life that was promoted by America's founding fathers.

And "roller skating" is NOT a threatening activity, despite what hoas say. The kids wre going to their roller skating "classes".

When I was young, almost everyone here in the U.S. normally went roller skating.

You ask the seller for a copy before you sign the contract and the seller has to provide it if they want to make the sale.

Go to CIty Hall and talk to the Planning and Zoning Department-- sometimes called Community Development. Generally they will help you. If they do not help, go to a City Council meeting and ask them why you can't get a copy of the HOA from the City. Council critters generally respond to citizen's complaints.

Stay away from the Courthouse. They only know how to obfuscate the situation.

Don't go to where the deeds are kept. Go to P & Z or CD. Find the City Planner or the Building Inspector--they'll help you.

That's why I'll never understand the people who use their MURS radios to order food ahead of time from the fast food restaurant.

the food that is suppodsed to be hot is already cold enough by the time you get to the window when you order it at the normal time through the drive through.

Ordering it earlier would make it even colder.

good. the more confused BK employees are about it, the more they won't know exactly what to look for.

And I'm not about to tell THEM.

They're already confused anyways.

Whopperheads.

Although in my experience, recent Taco Bell employees are more confused than anyone else, no matter what Taco Bell restaurant you stop at.

And we have ways of knowing just how idiotic and airheaded you can all be.

Certain people know what I'm talking about and certain ways of how.

although we don't even need to do that to know.

Just driving through the drive through, ordering the food, and picking up the food is enough by itself to know, and then trying to exchange that for what you actually ordered only to have the Taco Bell employees (or other fast food employees) refuse to exchane it because they insist that that is what you ordered. Even tough you know it isn't.

What I am talking about is things like ordering a bean burrito and Why go to all this trouble?

In most, if not all, states the seller is required to provide such

Well part of that is because it really annoys the public. Most of the non-hams I know get really annoyed at us because we keep repeating the exact same thing over and over and over again.

then they yell at me, "QUIT REPEATING YOURSELF. YOU ALREADY SAID THAT. SO YOU DON'T NEED TO SAY IT AGAIN. IT'S VERY ANNOYING THAT YOY KEEP REPEATING THE EXACT SAME THING OVER AND OVER AND OVER AGAIN. SAY IT ONLY ONCE AND THAT'S IT."

What am I talking about? The public reaction to hams saying their legal i.d. every ten minutes. Which is required for hams to do by federal law. However, doing so and obeying that law really annoys the general public.

Jim --

He posted this originally in a ham radio group. I'm a ham operator myself and some HOA/POA CC&R place restrictions on antennas, antenna towers, and the like -- all of which are necessary to a ham radio operator (we consider a 50-foot steel tower with huge antennas and guy wires, 135-foot long wire antennas, and the like to be things of beauty -- neighbors tend to disagree :-)). He probably wants to see the CC&R before he decides whether or not to continue looking in that area, so, he may not have a seller yet.

If his real estate agent does not have his head up his ass, he should be able to get a copy for him -- ask the agent and make him earn his commission.

If all the houses in the area of interest were built at the same time and by the same builder, then they are likely identical, otherwise all bets are off and two houses next to each other may have differenct CC&R.

You go to the seller and ask how much. If you still have interest you ask for the CC&R. Since they are part of the sales contract, the seller HAS to provide them.

This is not rocket science.

I still have my old FCC-approved 40 channel cb I bought brand-new years ago, and right on the box by the manufacturer itself, it says this 40 channel cb has "five watts output power".

It was probably a Midland and it was talking about audio output power.

It depends where the power measurement is taken. 5W into the final filter to the antenna connector is fine because there is some loss in the process as the receiving circuitry (the portion not switched out) drains some power.

This is some kind of troll, right? Ask your realtor. If you don't have one, get one. And remember, there is a huge difference between a realtor who is a professional and a real estate agent. By law in Illinois and most (if not all) other states, CC&R's must be made available prior to purchase. Some associations enforce these to the letter - others' don't. Your realtor should have this info at the time you first view the home. If he/she doesn't - get another realtor.

When exactly did THAT happen? I not defending these people because they ARE for the mopst part idiot's, but I refuse to believe they can look at an item, be told what it is, and still say it's something else. Especially a taco and a burrito. I thikn it's that YOU don't know what the hell your talking about. Would you happen to be a woman by chance? They usually have the most difficulty with drive-thru's.
